JUDGE LORING DISMISSES RUSSELL MOTION

SUPREME COURT NOT TO DECIDE WHO'S HEIR

Judge Loring, in the Supreme Court today, dismissed without prejudice the motions made by William R. Scharton, in connection with the Russell will case. The motions were that Master Gilbert A. A. Pevey, before whom the case is being heard in East Cambridge, merely report the evidence to the Supreme Court at the end of the hearing, and not decide as to whether Dakota Dan is the heir. The other motion was for the court to appoint and pay a stenographer to take the evidence. It was found the court had no funds for that purpose.

Attorney Scharton advanced the novel contention that in permitting a master to decide the will case the Supreme Court of Massachusetts sanctioned the usurpation of its authority and transferred its powers to an individual appointee, not a member of that tribunal.

Judge Loring ruled, in substance, that while some of the points raised by counsel for Dakota Dan were well taken, he thought the petitioner was wrong in thinking the Supreme Court had misconceived its power. He said the practice was to accept the report of a master purely on questions of fact and that on questions of law the petitioner reserved rights for exception.

Finds Only on Fact.

Judge Loring further held that the court never overturned the findings of a master on questions of fact unless there was extraordinary cause. Those findings were, he said, to be based entirely on facts and not on law which left final discretion and determination for the Supreme Court. He said he dismissed the motion without prejudice in order to permit Attorney Scharton to renew his motion should conditions warrant such a step.

The hearing lasted thirty minutes. Attorney William R. Scharton and John H. McNally appeared for Dakota Dan and Attorneys Robert W. Nelson and Eugene C. Upton represented the will. Executor Ferdinand B. Almy also was in court. Neither of the rival Dans was on hand.

Judge Loring said he was not familiar with the case and asked for particulars. Attorney Scharton explained that by a previous order of the Supreme Court, issued by Judge Braley, the four actions growing out of the Russell will case had been consolidated and submitted to Master Pevey.

What Court Was Asked.

These actions, he said, involved a petition to have Dakota Dan identified as the rightful son and heir, a petition for the dismissal of the receivers who have charge of the portion of the estate set apart for the missing Daniel Blake Russell, a petition for partial distribution and a petition that the executors be placed under $100,000 bonds.

"We wish to waive our petition for the removal of Master G. A. A. Pevey," said Attorney Scharton." Instead we seek to have the court order Master Pevey to submit all the evidence to the Supreme Court, so that tribunal, the highest in this commonwealth, may pass on the case instead of an individual appointee who is not a member of the court.

"In Judge Braley's court appears the

STRIKERS EXPECTED TO GET OLD JOBS BACK

The strike of the Elevated employes came to a provisional settlement at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the State House. The terms were at once sent before a hurriedly called special meeting of the board of directors of the road for ratification. The settlement needs only the ratification of the strikers and the directors. It is thought that without doubt this will be given before night. The terms of the settlement will be announced after the directors have ratified them.

It is known the strike ends with a victory for the strikers. Men who struck will be given back their jobs. Those who have not been arrested or convicted of offences during the strike will be given back their places at once.

The strike was brought to its final stage today at the State House at a conference of Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, and representatives of the Elevated Company and the strikers. It was the last of a series of independent conferences at the State House brought about by the Governor and the Mayor to end the strike.

John Reisler, alias "John the Barber," who saw "Bridgy" Webber running from the scene of the Rosenthal murder, is shown in the witness chair in Coroner Feinberg's court. The man standing, in centre of group, is District Attorney Whitman. Behind him, leaning forward, is Webber, who is smiling in triumph as the witness, screened by the presence of the "gangsters," contradicts his own testimony previously given. Later, after his arrest for perjury, he cleared himself by making affidavit to the truth of his original statement.

STATE SHUTS 6 LOAN OFFICES

Six offices of the Chattel Loan Company, with an annual loan account of $600,000, have been ordered closed by E. Gerry Brown, Supervisor of Loan Agencies, for violation of the rules. It was learned today the company had failed to file returns of loans.

Under the law the supervisor sent auditors to examine the books of the company. The officers refused to deliver the books, and an order was issued by Mr. Brown, closing the offices.

The offices will be ordered closed until they comply with the rules. Allen A. Hooker, treasurer of the company, was not in his office today, and the other officers refused to discuss the situation. The offices of the Chattel Loan Company ordered closed are the Wage Earners' Loan Company, No. 16 State street; the Salary Loan, No. 525 Washington street; the City Loan, No. 630 Washington street; the Globe Loan Company, No. 641 Washington street, and two Chattel Loan offices, one at No. 178 and the other at No. 257 Washington street.

CONVICTED OF THEFT OF PHARAOH'S AMULET

CHICAGO, July 26.—Finger-print evidence was the basis of a verdict of guilty returned by a jury against John C. Hartzell, accused of stealing from the museum of the University of Chicago a golden amulet, owned by a Pharaoh 3,500 years ago.

Church Cabaret at Narragansett To Be Gay Affair

NEWPORT, July 26.—Not only will the Narragansett cottage colony turn out in full force, but many from Newport will go over to the "Pier" this evening for the cabaret entertainment to be given at the Casino for the benefit of the Church of St. Peter's-by-the-Seat.

The ballroom of the Casino will be made to resemble as near as possible a cafe chantant in Paris. Small tables will be placed about the room, where light refreshments will be served during the show, which will include negro singers and players, and an Italian band from New York.

There will be dancing on the terraces after the performances and favors in the shape of caps, rattles, blowers and serpentines will be distributed.

EXPECT TO CALL DARROW TO STAND IN TRIAL TODAY

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—Attorney Earl Rogers, in charge of the Darrow defence, announced today that Clarence S. Darrow probably would be called this afternoon to testify in his own behalf at his trial for jury bribing. Darrow will be the last witness. The fact he takes the stand will not prevent his arguing his own case, according to Rogers. Darrow is an attorney of record in the case, and will make an argument before the jury.

POLICE LOCATE AUTO SLAYERS

NEW YORK, July 26.—A cordon of police was thrown about half a mile of terrible In Harlem this afternoon, when the police received a report that Harry Horowitz, alias "Gib the Blood," "Lefty Louie" and "Whitey" Lewis, all wanted as accessories to the murder of Herman Rosenthal, were hiding in a flat there. Several squads of police then began "combing" the section.

Later new important prisoners, a new eye-witness, and a full confession from the driver of the car went far today towards clearing up the mystery. One of the prisoners, it is said, is held as a material witness.

One of the two men arrested charged with the murder is "Dago Frank" for whom a country-wide search was instituted last week. At midnight Inspector Hughes declared no police had not discovered his real name. He is believed to be Frank Muzio, doorkeeper at "Bridgy" Webber's gambling house.

Great secrecy was observed in bringing the prisoners into headquarters. Second Deputy Commissioner Dougherty was quickly summoned and spent an hour with the prisoners and two detectives before a word concerning the arrests was admitted.

The prisoner gave his name as Frank Cirofel, but the police say he is the "Dago" Frank Muzio wanted in the case. He was taken in the arguments of a woman

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR A GREAT NAVY

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 26.—Taking direct issue with the Democrats, who have declared against building up the American Navy, Colonel Roosevelt today declared that to prevent the United States becoming the China of the Western hemisphere, it would be necessary to carry on the program providing for the construction of battleships.

He asserted that this country might as well think of abandoning the Panama Canal as giving up the policy of strengthening the navy. To make his position clear the ex-President issued the following formal statement:

The Democrats, if they vote down the battleship program, if logical, should vote to abandon the Panama canal. It is as understandable a policy to abandon the Panama canal as to abandon building up the fleet and to say this nation shall simply become the China of the Western Hemisphere.

Demands Adequate Navy.

I don't believe in that policy, but at least it's understandable. But the one unpardonable policy is to incur responsibility and then to decline to adopt the necessary means to enable us to meet that responsibility. It is an outrage from the standpoint of national honor and interests to go on with the Panama canal at all unless we both fortify it and keep up an adequate navy.

Furthermore, any talk as to what we intend to do about the Monroe Doctrine, the Panama Canal or the protection of Hawaii, or any other

THAW MUST STAY IN MATTEAWAN; HABEAS CORPUS WRIT IS DENIED

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 26.—Justice Keogh this afternoon handed down a decision denying to Harry K. Thaw his release from Matteawan on his writ of habeas corpus.

The decision of Justice Keogh denying liberty to Thaw in his third effort to escape from the madhouse was brief. It held that the applicant had not proved his sanity and ordered his return to the Matteawan Asylum for the Insane, from which he was taken when the writ of habeas corpus was sworn out.

MIKADO MAY NOT SURVIVE 24 HOURS; MINISTERS CALLED

TOKIO, July 26.—The Imperial ministers were summoned to the palace this evening in anticipation of the death of Emperor Mutsuhito. The Mikado's strength was slowly ebbing and the physicians held out no hope that he would live another twenty-four hours.

The physicians, after a consultation, announced that the patient had been able to secure little sleep during the night and that exhaustion was becoming much more marked.

There was a fluctuation in the temperature during the day. The 9 a. m. bulletin said: "Temperature 100.7, pulse 100, respiration 32."

A bulletin issued at 3 p. m. read: "Temperature 101.8, pulse 100, respiration 30."

Three hours later the temperature had fallen to 100.3, while at 9 p. m. the following bulletin was issued: "Temperature 100.2, pulse 100, respiration 32. Pulse irregular though firm. Tongue darkly coated. Continuing as yesterday."

Immediately after this bulletin the ministers were summoned and the Empress, who had been snatching some sleep, was awakened.

CARDINALS IN WRECK; PILGRIMS' GAME OFF

The game between the Pilgrims and the St. Louis Cardinals, which was scheduled to be played at the Walpole street grounds this afternoon, has been called off. The Cardinal team will not arrive in this city until 5 o'clock this afternoon, as it was held up in the Middle West by a train wreck.

The Boston National management received a wire early today from the railroad officials, who stated that it would be impossible for the St. Louis team to get into Boston in time for the game.

The wire did not state where the wreck had taken place or whether or not any member of the St. Louis team had been injured.

The announcement was made at the National League headquarters that a double-header would be played tomorrow with the Cardinals. The Pilgrims have been playing good ball lately and a big crowd is expected to turn out for the contests.

RUSSELL WILL HEARING GOES ON BEFORE PEVEY

clause 'and decide the case.' If the Master is given this unusual power it diverts the authority of this august court."

"That phrase 'decide the case' does sound unusual," said Judge Braley; "but it doesn't interfere with the rights of the petitioners. It simply means that the master is authorized to report on the facts and not on the law points. This is the general rule and practice. The court still reserves the right to pass upon the law and you are entitled to file exceptions in the event of an adverse finding."

Wants Clause Cut Out.

"We would like to have that clause, 'and to decide the case,' stricken out," added Mr. Scharton.

"I believe you also want to have the master report all of the evidence to the Supreme Court?"

Robert Nason, the swarthy-faced attorney, who appears for the Russell estate, is unusually calm and deliberate. He makes it a great deal easier for the reporters who write their stories in court for the afternoon papers than William Scharton does. A fast writer can keep up to Nason pretty well, but Scharton talks so fast that the stenographer has a tough job keeping up with him. Also Nason looks a great deal younger than most men of his age. He apparently is a member of the Don't Worry Club.

"Your honor, we contend that this is a most extraordinary case. It is one of the most remarkable in the history of the jurisprudence of Massachusetts. It involves the question of birthright and name, as well as title to property. Two men are in a court in Middlesex County claiming to be the long-lost Daniel Blake Russell. One must on the face of things be an impostor.

Judge Loring: Has the evidence been taken to date so that the master could comply with this demand?

Attorney Scharton: It has.

Nason Objects.

Attorney Nason: May it please your honor, the evidence is of such a nature that the Supreme Court could not possibly judge it correctly from a mass of typewritten copy. It would be impossible for this court to determine from a lot of printed matter the conduct and mannerisms of the witnesses and the atmosphere surrounding them and their claims.

Judge Loring thought as Attorney Nason did on this part. He said he believed the case was so peculiar in many respects as to make a full transcript of the evidence of no value to anybody but the master.

Attorney Nason called attention to the fact that Judge Braley's order specifically stated the master was not to report the testimony.

Attorney Scharton replied that prejudices and personalities had been injected into the case. In the first place a prominent official of Middlesex County, he said, was a star witness for the will, the master was a resident of the County and acquainted with the respondents, or many of them, and because of these and other elements he felt undue caution should be maintained.

"The integrity of our courts is at stake," added Mr. Scharton. "Our rights should be protected. This means much to the rightful heir. It means his name. It is a case for a jury but we were denied that privilege. It is an extraordinary case and should have extraordinary measures."

FINDS FATHER'S BODY MONTH AFTER DEATH; BLAMES THE POLICE

After a month's search, during which the man's family has been frantic with anxiety, James Smith, Jr., of No. 38 Dale street, Roxbury, has discovered the body of his father, James Smith, fifty-five, a well-to-do citizen of North Adams, in the City Hospital morgue. The body has been at the morgue since June 22, and the man's relatives today blamed the police for neglecting to inform them of the death of Smith a month ago. Friends of the family said they might never have located the missing man had it not been for a news story published in the AMERICAN.

Smith came to Boston to visit his son on June 18. The next morning he went out for a walk before breakfast. He did not reappear.

A month passed. Young Smith kept up his search. He was informed by the police last Wednesday that the body of a man named James Smith was at the morgue. The police said this man had been taken into custody on June 19 on Washington street and carried to the Roxbury Crossing station. He was taken to the Austin Farm in Dorchester, where he died June 22.

4 NEAR-DROWNINGS IN TWO DAYS ON STEAMER BELFAST

When three members of the crew of the steamer Belfast—Frank James, William Boyd and Thomas Nelson—were painting from a floating pontoon today, the steamer Betty Alden of the Nantasket line came along, and the wash upset the pontoon. Edward Malway, another seaman, on the last trip to Camden, Me., fell overboard, and for forty-five minutes was in the water two miles astern.

Hunt Tiny Waif's Parents — Baby Pet of Cambridge Home

A little girl, two months old, and without a name because she was abandoned by one or both her parents, was petted at the Cambridge City Home today while the police hunt for her father and mother. The baby was found on the Charles River Parkway, near Western avenue. The infant had been placed near a clump of bushes, where she was discovered, quite contented, with a half-filled bottle of milk.

At the Cambridge City Home, the matron, Mrs. Charles Goodrow, took charge of the infant, while everybody gathered around and admired her. The baby is a well-nourished child, and evidently of good parentage. She was well dressed, and there were marks about the clothing that seemed to indicate it might have been made by some one who once had been in the City Home. The clothing was like that made in the Home.

matter, is not merely offensive, but contemptible, if we abandon building up the navy and show that we really have neither the power nor the will, if the need should ever come, to make our word good by deed.

Those Who Find Trouble.

Out in the country in the old days it used to be proverbial that the man who was most apt to get into trouble was the man who was always ready to draw, but not to shoot. The man who never got into trouble was the man who was never flustered, who never was offensive, who never wronged or insulted anyone, but who, as everybody well knew, was entirely competent to hold his own if attacked.

I believe in the upbuilding of the United States navy as an insurance for peace. The voyage of our battleship fleet around the world was one of the greatest moves for peace this country has ever made. I hope that our people will always behave, not only with scrupulous justice, but with the utmost generosity toward all other nations, weak and strong.

And I also hope that it will make it evident that such action is due not to timidity on our part, but to genuine love of justice; and we will become impotent either to secure justice for others or to secure the best for ourselves if we abandon the upbuilding of the navy, for the minute we stop building up the navy, the navy begins to go backwards.

Laughs at Bryan Attack.

Colonel Roosevelt has finished his speech which will be delivered at the national convention of the Bull Moose party to be held in Chicago, and the manuscript was sent today to the printers. He spent the morning in riding and visiting his neighbors. When he returned to his home the statement of William Jennings Bryan was shown to him. In the statement Bryan refers to Roosevelt as "Hamiltonian and a retrogressive."

Roosevelt dismissed the matter with a smile, and the only comment he would offer was:

"Oh, well, it is not the first time that Bryan has attacked me. I guess we can pass over anything he might say without feeling peeved."

GOVERNMENT NEAR DEFEAT IN COMMONS

LONDON, July 26.—The government narrowly escaped defeat in the House of Commons on a snap vote today. A discussion was up on the Chancellor of the Exchequer's motion relating to the transaction of public business on Monday. A division, which the Liberals did not anticipate, was demanded, and on the count the government won by the narrow margin of three votes.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 26.—What is believed to be the largest baby in the world is the son of Jose Fox and wife, who are going to Joplin, where they expect to live. The baby is fifteen months old and weighs seventy-seven pounds. The parents say they have fed it diluted whiskey since it was two weeks old.

NOTORIOUS SUIT CASE THIEF CHANGES PLEA TO "GUILTY"

Thomas M. McFarlane, said by the police to be one of the most notorious suit case thieves in the country, was arraigned before Judge Ely in the lower police court today charged with stealing $78,000 worth of property in suit cases. Although he pleaded not guilty last week, he surprised the officers today by pleading guilty to the charge. He was held for the Superior Court in $20,000 bail.

The police say that McFarlane comes from San Francisco and during the Spanish-American War he served in the same battery with John Jacob Astor. At one time he was a cook for Eva Booth of the Salvation Army. He has been operating with success between the North and South stations for several months.

YANK C. C. WILSON BACK TO PRISON

NEW YORK, July 26.—Acting under special orders from U. S. Attorney-General Wickersham, Marshall Henkel today took charge of Christopher Columbus Wilson, former president of the United States Wireless Company, who was brought to New York from the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., on July 1 to testify in bankruptcy proceedings and sent Wilson back to prison in charge of two deputy marshals. Wilson was called before the Federal Grand Jury yesterday but was unable to explain why he had not been confined in the tombs during his stay in New York city but was permitted to roam about town in company with Deputy Warden C. J. Shea of the Atlanta prison.

HUMPHREY MAKES A REPLY TO NORRIS

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Representative Humphrey of Washington, today, in the House, made a bitter assault upon Representative Norris of Nebraska for refusing to name the "Men in high standing in the Taft party" who furnished information showing President Taft has been fraudulently supported by a majority of the delegates of the State of Washington at the Chicago convention. Likening Mr. Norris' comment to the "methods of the blackmailer and the poisoner of domestic peace," Representative Humphrey declared he was using a method held in contempt by all decent men.

the strike inquiry, refused to answer questions put to them by District Attorney Pelletier and the jurors and were upheld by Judge Pierce in the Suffolk Superior Court.

Judge Pierce ruled that with the superintendents as witnesses it was a matter of their constitutional rights, and that they could not be compelled to answer questions that might tend to incriminate them.

The superintendents who refused to answer were Herbert H. Presho, Joseph L. Webber, James Smith, Carl Barnes, Thomas E. Williams, John Harrington and Nugent Fallon.

After Judge Pierce had made his decision, it was suggested District Attorney Pelletier might carry the case before a Supreme Court judge. No announcement was made of the District Attorney's immediate intentions.

Action Causes Stir.

The action of the Elevated officials caused a stir in the courthouse when the facts were learned. District Attorney Pelletier was known to be eager to have the superintendents answer his questions regarding the discharge of motormen and conductors in the month that preceded the street car strike.

It was said the investigation would go on with the hearing of evidence from other witnesses.

After the superintendents declined to reply to the questions of the grand jurors and the District Atorney, Mr. Pelletier went before Judge Pierce in an attempt to compel the men to testify.

District Attorney Pelletier, addressing Judge Pierce, said:

"Certain men, five or six in number, I believe each a superintendent for the Boston Elevated, were summoned before the Grand Jury with certain books, papers and records.

Pelletier Appeals to Court.

"In answer to questions they refused to testify. I think it can be made clearer to the court if Mr. Robbins (referring to Court Stenographer Henry Robbins) will read certain questions that were typical of the line of questioning."

Judge Pierce agreed and Stenographer Robbins took the stand and read from his notes as follows:

Q.—Mr. Webber (referring to Superintendent Joseph L. Webber)—You remember that you are still under oath? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you the records of your division and how are they marked? A.—They are marked with the figure 1.

Q.—Where are the marks? A.—On the cars.

Q.—Did you testify before the State board? A.—I decline to answer.

Q.—On the ground that it may incriminate you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you take an oath before the State Board? A.—I decline to answer.

Q.—For the same reason. A.—Yes.

MAYOR TELLS OF NEGOTIATIONS TO BRING STRIKE PEACE

After a conference between Attorney Vahey, representing the strikers' committee, and Attorney Snow, counsel for the Elevated, Mayor Fitzgerald made this statement:

We received the report of the striking conductors and motormen at 9:30 when the committee reached the Council chamber. We discussed it for a half hour. Following that we had a conference with the Elevated, while the men's committee at our request remained in the Council chamber to permit of further negotiations. Governor Foss and I wished the men to wait until we learned what the final attitude of the Elevated directors would be.

Inasmuch as the matters in dispute were matters of detail Governor Foss and I suggested that a joint conference be held by representatives of both parties. Attorneys Snow and Vahey were then called in joint conference in an endeavor to straighten out these matters of detail.

I will be frank and state that the whole dispute now revolves itself around the question of reinstatement of the strikers—the manner in which they shall be reinstated and the methods to be employed. That is the only vital point that remains to be disposed of.

If we can dispose of this question I don't think there is anything that can arise which will prevent a settlement.

Attorneys Snow for the Elevated and Vahey for the strikers are trying to draft some mutually satisfactory plan for reinstatement of these men. The entire question now revolves itself around the way in which the strikers shall be reinstated, the details of which are being worked out by Mr. Snow and Mr. Vahey.

Governor Foss and I both are confident that this one difference will be overcome before either delegation leaves the State House today.

"Boston's Busiest Buzz Buggy," Latest For Mayor's Auto

Still they come.

The letters suggesting names for the Mayor's new $5,000 sixty-horsepower automobile continue to pour into the Mayor's office. A story in the AMERICAN inviting suggestions has caused Colonel Dick Field, the official letter opener, to work overtime for the past two days. The Colonel guesses some "sentimental cuss" is responsible for the title, "Love's Melody," the first name among today's contributions.

A. H. Russell of No. 117 Brookline avenue would put four Bs on the side of the machine, meaning "Boston's Busiest Buzz Buggy." "Thora" is suggested by Edward Epsom of No. 218 Freeman street, Brookline. Miss Gertrude Woolfson of No. 49 Sherman street, Cambridge, offers "Mercury," and William D. Brigham of No. 41 Wheatland avenue, Dorchester, presents "The Dynamo," since he believes the Mayor to be the nearest approach to a human dynamo.

Little Willie Cronan, Colonel Field's office boy, has suggested "It."

LABOR LEADER ASKS THE DEVIL TO TAKE LORD DEVONPORT

LONDON, July 26.—A fiery speech threatening revolution throughout England was made by Ben Tillet, the labor leader, to a mass meeting of striking dock workers on Tower Hill today.

"It is not German dreadnoughts that the British government has to fear—it is British dreadnoughts," declared Tillet, while his great audience shrieked its approval.

Two thousand extra police were called out to prevent disorder during and after the meeting. Referring to Lord Devonport, whom the strikers declare to be their bitterest enemy, Tillet said in his speech:

"A couple of days ago we asked God to do something with Lord Devonport, but now we know that God didn't require him, so let the devil take him."

STRIKE-BREAKING CONDUCTOR FAILS TO APPEAR IN COURT

Valentine King, a strike breaking conductor formerly employed on Division 3, failed to appear to answer to a charge of assault when his case was called by Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court today.

King had been arraigned yesterday and his case continued. He was held on $50 bail, which he furnished in cash, drawing a roll of bills from his pocket.

The charge against King was that he assaulted Andrew Mahoney. Mahoney boarded a car, according to his own story, in Edward Everett square last Friday. He offered King a transfer. King refused to take it because it was not punched. Mahoney insisted that it had been given to him. A fight followed.

BURGLAR SCARE IN BOSTON BANK

The downtown financial district had a midsummer burglar scare today, when just after 9:30 o'clock the giant gong alarm in front of the Court street entrance to the Old Colony Trust Company began to clang.

The din was tremendous. It was the burglar alarm, and it meant that the doors of the great vaults inside had been opened by someone who had no business to open them.

A policeman on the opposite corner whipped out his club and came on the run. Another, down the street, scurried up, his whistle shrilling between his teeth. Pedestrians gathered in a dense crowd. The patrolmen clamored at the door of the bank. The gong still insisted that the bank was being burglarized.

Up at headquarters the alarm had been received and Inspector Waite was hurried off to the scene. Three patrolmen were dispatched from Station 2.

When they arrived they found the first arrivals coming back out of the bank. It had been explained to them that the clerk who opened the vaults forgot to throw off the alarm switch.

False Teeth Taken From Woman's Throat by Rare Operation

Surgeons aided by an X-ray and strong forceps, removed the false teeth which Mrs. Carrie Smith of Fosdick terrace, Lynn, swallowed on Monday. The operation saved the woman's life. The operation, performed by Dr. Carolus M. Cobb, assisted by Dr. E. F. Ruppel, at the Lynn Hospital, is called the first of its kind in New England. Following a method devised by Dr. Killian of Berlin the physicians put the woman in the position of a sword-swallower assumes just before his performance. Flat on her back on the operating table, her head was drawn down till the throat cavity was opened. The X-ray exposed the teeth. Dr. Cobb inserted forceps and drew them out.

MISS ANDREWS' DEBUT TONIGHT

NEWPORT, July 26.—With Vincent Astor on the Atlantic, bound for Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Andrews will tonight "bring out" their daughter, Miss Margaret Andrews, at a dinner and dance at their Newport villa.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews have denied that Miss Andrews and young Astor are engaged. But Newport gossips insist that young Astor's absence will be the only thing lacking at her debut in the eyes of Miss Andrews. The lovely young girl is "coming out" a year ahead of the time originally set. In this also, the gossips see confirmation of the rumor that couples her name and young Astor's.

BLAME NIGHTMARE FOR NICHOLS' FATAL PLUNGE FROM TRAIN

That Curtis Nichols, the West Newton traveling salesman who was killed by falling from the window of a sleeping car on a Boston & Albany express train, did not commit suicide as Medical Examiner Russell of Springfield holds, but jumped through the window while in a nightmare, is the belief of his friends and relatives.

His brother-in-law, C. F. Roper of Hopedale, owner of the C. F. Roper Company, for which Nichols worked, is convinced that the plunge was due to a nightmare. Under the influence of nightmare, Mr. Roper said Nichols had been known to leave his bed and rush about in terror.

Those who were with Nichols before he left for Boston to catch the Albany express, scout the idea of suicide. With a group of neighbors he spent some time on the piazza of Mrs. Charles F. Paine's house on Webster street, and all said that he was the life of the party.

KEHILA FLAYS KOSHER STRIKE

The executive board of the Kehila, or Greater Boston Jewish community, scored the kosher meat boycott and denounced the proposed co-operative stores as a "new-fangled idea, proposed by irresponsible persons."

The committee declared that the co-operative movement would drive the small meat dealers out of business, and advised the Jews of Boston from going into it. It declares that there are much more important problems confronting the Jews than the price of kosher meat, and it announces that it is at work on a plan by which it hopes to remedy the evils of the day.

SENATE PASSES WOOLEN BILL

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Senator La Follette's woolen bill, passed last year as a substitute bill, modified in conference and vetoed by President Taft, was passed again, as a substitute, by the Senate, after a long debate. The vote was 40 to 26, eleven Progressive Senators voting with the Democrats to pass the measure. The House is now expected to ask for a conference.

The tariff battle thus stands exactly where it did a year ago, except that President Taft's former veto was based on the fact that the tariff board had not reported, while now the report has been received and examined.

NEW EYE-WITNESS OF ROSENTHAL KILLING

who described herself as Rose Harris, in Harlem.

After prolonged questioning the prisoner was sent to a cell for the night on a charge of complicity in the murder of Rosenthal, the charge being made by Deputy Commissioner Dougherty. Rose Harris is known to the police as "Regina Gordon."

A man who is described by the police as "Abe" Leefs, a clerk, and more familiarly known to them as "Fat Abe," was brought in from the Harlem house with the others. Both the women and "Fat Abe" were held by the police over night as witnesses.

"Dago Frank" asserted he was not in New York city on the night of the murder. On this point Mr. Dougherty says, the suspect and the Harris woman differ.

William Shapiro, the chauffeur of the gray car, No. 41,313, in which the murderers of Herman Rosenthal escaped, made what he said was a full confession yesterday to District Attorney Whitman. He will become a State's witness, whose testimony will be used in particular in the prosecution of "Jack" Rose, "Bridgy" Webber, Harry Vallon and Sam Schepps for complicity in the crime.

Threatened in Tombs.

The tow-haired hatless boy told his story offensive with a quiver, as if called to his mind again the horror of the night. He admitted that while in the Tombs he had been threatened by Rose, Webber, Vallon and Sam Paul, fellow prisoners, and that he feared for his life in revealing all he knew.

"But the ghost of that dead man won't let me sleep," he cried. "I've got to tell it."

Coupled with other statements made to District Attorney Whitman yesterday, it now appears that a triple trap was set for Rosenthal.

It was the duty of Jack Rose, Lieutenant Becker's friend, to take the assassins to the Hotel Metropole and then after the shooting to engineer their escape.

The task said to have been assigned Webber was to keep Rosenthal in the Metropole Hotel until exactly 2 o'clock, when the assassins were all ready for their victim outside.

The third and interlocking role was said to have been played by Harry Vallon, who went into the Metropole from the murder car at 2 o'clock and called Rosenthal out.

The only man in his car just prior to the murder whose names Shapiro remembered were Harry Vallon and Sam Schepps. Jack Rose, he said, stood on the curb when the shooting was done and gave him his final orders for making the getaway.

Only One Did Killing.

Only one man killed Rosenthal, Shapiro insisted, and according to the chauffeur's description this gunman is believed to be "Lefty" Louis, the lieutenant of "Big Jack" Zelig.

After Rosenthal fell dead Shapiro raced off with these four passengers in the car, the assassin, Sam Schepps and two gangsters who are believed to have been Whitey Lewis and Harry Horowitz, "Dago Frank," who was arrested last night, made his escape afoot.

"I thought there was going to be some tough work that night, because I've been out with some of that bunch before," stammered Shapiro, "but I never knew there was to be a murder until I heard the shots and saw a man drop flat in the light of the Metropole's electric sign."

"But you have driven Zelig around town and you knew Zelig was a gunman," said the District Attorney.

"Yes, I knew Zelig."

"And you have been in other shooting scrapes in which Zelig was the leader?"

This Shapiro finally admitted, but to prove that such former experiences gave him no hint of the plot to murder Rosenthal, he said: "I didn't see Zelig that night."

Jack Rose Prominent.

Throughout Shapiro's story, Jack Rose figured as the principal actor. Shapiro did not say Lieutenant Becker knew what was going to happen. Rose, the alleged collector for Becker, did boast again and again, Shapiro said, that he stood in so well with the police that the department would never interfere with him or any of his friends.

"Jack Rose called for my car when I was in front of the Cafe Boulevard," Shapiro began. "He wanted me at Sinatra's. I picked him up there together with Sam Schepps and another man. They told me to drive up town. I also carried Rose as a passenger a hundred times and thought nothing of taking such orders."

"Did not Rose say there was something going to drop that night and then give you $50 in advance to insure you would stick?" asked the District Attorney.

"I got suspicious now or twice," admitted the chauffeur, "because of what I overheard but thought the bunch was only going to do a little rough house.

"I dropped Schepps at Bridgy Webber's and took Rose up to his brother-in-law's flat in Lenox avenue, near One Hundred and Fortieth street. I picked up a couple of men there."

"Were they 'Lefty' Louis and Harry Horowitz, or 'Sip the Blood'?" questioned the District Attorney.

"I don't know their names."

"Well, one of them was about five feet, seven inches, pale, dark-haired with his head sort of thrown back."

"That's 'Lefty' Louis, isn't it?" queried Commissioner Dougherty.

"The description fits 'Lefty' Louis," said the District Attorney.

Shapiro finally agreed that the other man arrested fitted the description of "Whitey" Lewis, who like "Lefty" Louis, is a Zelig henchman.

On the way back to "Bridgy" Webber's the car picked up another man, who was described as light and long-haired, with a blurting manner of speech. According to Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, this third passenger was Harry Horowitz, or "Sip the Blood."

All scrambled out of the automobile at "Bridgy" Webber's about 1:30 a. m.

"I had a few drinks at a saloon at Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Fifth street," continued the chauffeur, "and when they didn't invite me up at 'Bridgy' Webber's to have some more, I got sort of sore. I said to Rose, 'You fellows are having a h—l of a good time tonight. Why don't you let me in on all of it?'

"'That's all right' said Rose. 'You'll get yours after a while. I want you to keep sober just now,' and he slipped me another $10 bill.

"Fixed It With Police."

"After I had waited about ten minutes Rose, Sam Schepps and Harry Vallon came out of Webber's and walked over to the car. They tried not to let me hear what they said but I picked up enough to know that 'Bridgy' Webber was over to the Hotel Metropole and everything was all right.'"

"Schepps and Vallon got into the car. Vallon had been drinking a lot. He wasn't sick, or anything like that, but sort of ugly like. He was ready for any game that might be turned. Yet even then I didn't think there was going to be any 'strong arm' business.

"Rose told me to drive around to the Hotel Metropole, saying he would walk along behind and join me there. Schepps and Vallon insisted on getting into the car. I don't think that Rose wanted them in at first time, but it looked like an argument unless they had their way, so they rode. The two rough neck guys that I had picked up before were also in the car.

"I drove around to the Metropole and found the machine east in Forty-third street, near the Cohan Theatre. A minute later Rose came walking by in the shadow of the buildings of the south side of the street. He told me to stay in the car and keep the engine going, as friends of his were likely to come at any minute, and when they did they wanted to start right off.

"Sam Schepps hung around, and Harry Vallon wandered down the north side of the street.

"The strong arm boys slipped out of sight. They must have got behind the lower part of the Metropole, for that is where they showed up later. Vallon kept wandering around as if he was just killing time, and finally he went into the Metropole. At the same time Sam Schepps climbed onto the back seat of the machine. I suppose to prevent my running off. I didn't realize the meaning of the move then.

How Shooting Was Done.

"Vallon came right out of the hotel and a moment later the man who I learned later was Rosenthal stepped out. That instant I heard the pistol shots. Only one man did the shooting."

Here the District Attorney sought to obtain an exact description of the assassin but his repeated questioning failed to clear up exactly the murderer's identity. Shapiro insisted that he could not tell exactly because of the Metropole light that shone in his eyes.

"It was one of those guys that I picked up in Harlem," was Shapiro's stock answer. He couldn't remember the name. The description, however, fitted Lefty Louis more closely than any of the other men who are said by the police to be in the kind of assassins.

"At the sight of the shooting I was almost struck," whispered the chauffeur, fairly trembling in his chair, "I was the nearest man to the scene of the shooting. Three men jumped into the car, and one banged me over the head with his gun with the threat that unless I started he would blow my brains out.

"The man who struck me was the murderer, and the gun was still warm. I was so scared that I thought the clutch was the brake, and I threw so much gas into the carburetor that the engine was racing when I finally got into first speed.

"Vallon was the coolest man in the bunch. I think it was he who said no one ought to get excited and Rose had the police fixed. Rose stood on the sidewalk as we passed headed for Sixth avenue and he said: 'Don't lose your nerve kid. If you stick to your machine no one is going to hurt you.'

"The gangsters in the car were the biggest cowards. They swore and cursed and threatened to blow my block off unless I went faster."

How the car got away without eyes seeing the taxicab in pursuit was recited with the same details as have already been printed.

John J. Hickey, the new eye witness, told the District Attorney that he stood within three feet of Rosenthal when the fatal shots were fired, a week ago Monday night. According to Hickey, as Mr. Whitman meagerly outlined his story, four shots from as many different revolvers were fired at the gambler.

Hickey also told, it was given out, that Rosenthal, when he walked out of the Metropole Cafe, was accompanied by several friends.

"BRIDGY" WEBBER TO QUIT GAMBLING AND REFORM "PALS"

NEW YORK, July 26.—If "Bridgy" Webber gets out of the present predicament he finds himself in as the result of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, he is going to devote himself to reforming his friends in the gambling world. "Bridgy" told Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty this on Wednesday, when Dougherty saw him in the Tombs following Justice Glogerich's dismissal of the writ of habeas corpus sued out by Webber's lawyer in the effort to get him out of the Tombs.

"Mr. Commissioner," said "Bridgy," "if ever I get out of this place I am going to stop gambling. Never again will I do anything wrong. The rest of my days I'll devote to reforming my pals."

So far Sam Paul, Harry Vallon and Jack Rose, who are also in the Tombs charged with being implicated in the Rosenthal murder, have not announced any stumbling of conducting similar crusades.

PLOT TO POISON SULTAN ALMOST KILLS MINISTERS

BERLIN, July 26.—A poison plot aimed at the Sultan, and which almost caused the death of two of his cabinet ministers, became known in Constantinople today, following a state dinner at the Porte last night, according to a dispatch from the Turkish capital. Cabinet Minister Kiamal Pasha and Mahmud Mukhtar Pasha were the guests most seriously stricken. In the midst of the feast they fell to the floor, and only the most heroic measures of physicians saved them. Several other diners were made ill. The palace cooks and all the attendants at the dinner were arrested and subjected to severe examination to make them reveal the heads of the conspiracy. It is said several men of the highest rank have been implicated by their confessions, and the government is fearful that to cause their execution would precipitate the revolution that is threatening to disrupt the empire.

CENSUS SHOWS WOMEN ARE MORE MORAL THAN MEN

LONDON, July 26.—Figures showing the relative morality, sobriety, health and sanity of the sexes are contained in the new volume of the decalied report of the census taken in England and Wales on April 2, 1911. Briefly, the figures show that, while women are more moral than men, they are not as sane or as sober. The statistics relating to the sexes may be tabulated thus:

Prisons, 139 women to 1,000 men. Certified reformatory industrial schools, 278 women to 1,000 men. Workhouse establishments, 655 women to 1,000 men. Hospitals, the sexes nearly equal. Lunatic asylums, 1,140 women to 1,000 men.

By MORTON BIRGE.

Now WANTED—a name, to shed lustre and fame
On Mayor Fitzgerald's new gasoline car;
A title, you know, for a car that can go
Some faster than any he's driven so far.

Some say a good bet would be "Senatorette,"
Referring, of course, to what may come to pass;
While others suggest that the neatest and best
Would be the "A1," for the Mayor's own class.

The "Joker," the "Kink" and the "Velvet Gazink,"
The "Fadeaway Fitz" and the "Busy Baked Bean,"
The "Codfish and Cream," the "Dill Pickle," or "Scream,"
Are names that might do for the Mayor's machine.

KNUCKLES USED TO CRACK AND BLEED

Hands Chapped, Suffered Terrible Pain. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment Five Weeks, Hands Fine.

674 Park Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.—"My hands used to chap and bleed, and they pained me very much. When I put them in water they used to burn terribly, especially in hot water. My hands looked dirty; that was because they were so chapped. The knuckles used to crack and bleed and I suffered terrible pain. I tried different remedies but they never did any good. A friend told me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I got some and made a lather from the Cuticura Soap and bathed my hands, then I dried them and put the Cuticura Ointment on and put on a pair of old gloves. I was surprised to see how my hands were healed. They used to be red and rough and now they are soft as velvet. I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for a week and they got fine. I have no more trouble with my hands since I always use Cuticura Soap and I can't praise it enough to all my friends." (Signed) Mrs. M. Weierman, Dec. 22, 1911.

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores. BATHING GIRLS! HERE'S MONEY

Famous artists and painters have depicted "The Bar Harbor Bathing Girl," "The Old Orchard Bathing Girl," "The Newport Bathing Girl," and so on all along the coast. But what about "The New England Bathing Girl?". Revere Beach is the mecca for all of the New England States. Bathers representing every town and hamlet in New England can be seen at this popular beach every day in the week.

That's the place to get a "type" of a "New England Bathing Girl." What does the typical one look like? Artists have not yet shown us—but the cameras of the AMERICAN'S photographers will.

Hundreds of pictures of bathing girls will be taken on the beach at Revere tomorrow and Sunday afternoons. From among the pictures taken, the most typical of "New England's Bathing Girl" will be reproduced in the AMERICAN. One picture of those taken Saturday afternoon will be printed the day following in the Sunday AMERICAN. One picture of those taken Sunday afternoon will be printed the day following in Monday's AMERICAN.

Each bathing girl whose picture is printed in the AMERICAN will receive $10 in gold when called for at the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 8 Winthrop square.

We are all anxious to have a look at the typical "New England Bathing Girl." So, look out, girls, at Revere Beach tomorrow and Sunday.

The AMERICAN camera man will be there and it means $10 for each girl whose picture is printed.

If you go bathing at Revere next Saturday or Sunday, watch the AMERICAN Sunday and Monday for your picture.

CRISIS IN CIVILIZATION NEARS, SAYS W. R. HEARST

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 26.—The Evening Standard publishes the following:

A great crisis in the evolution of civilization is approaching, which holds many pregnant possibilities for the leading nations of the world, in the opinion of Mr. William Randolph Hearst, the millionaire publisher of the New York American and other influential journals in his great newspaper syndicate.

"The coming of this crisis," said Mr. Hearst to the Standard interviewer, when seen at the Savoy Hotel, "is unmistakably indicated by the labor unrest, frenzied speculations, and business uncertainties that prevail in all countries, in spite of the much heralded era of prosperity.

"There is plenty of prosperity. It is true, according to statistics, but it is unfairly distributed. The already rich are getting too big a share of it, and the working classes too little.

Not Socialistic Doctrine.

"Don't infer from this, however, that I am in favor of any socialistic doctrine of equal division or even of a limitation of the opportunities for acquiring wealth. I believe that every man is entitled to as much money as he can make, either with his hands or his brains. I think that, too, is the general opinion. Most men realize that the discontent in the world of labor is the piling up of great fortunes for those who do nothing to earn them. In other words, the law of primogeniture and entailing of estates for the enrichment of unborn generations is the root of the present economic unrest, which all governments must solve before long if they expect to stand. Education of the masses has developed their powers of logic and thought, and they have begun to see the injustice of the present system.

"In the United States some steps already have been taken to meet the approaching crisis by placing a heavy inheritance tax upon all fortunes and by providing against their retention within limited family circles.

"Any man is free to amass as much wealth as he can earn, but he must scatter it widely at his death. The purpose of this is to get rid of the idlers, whose inherited wealth has deprived them of all understanding of the value of money, and that in turn has bred an extravagance which has had as much to do as anything else with the high cost of living in America.

Aristocracy of Class Idlers.

"The economic situation resulting from the unequal distribution of wealth is much worse in England than elsewhere. The gulf between the rich and the poor is made wider by the class distinctions here. The false doctrine of entailed estates and inheritance of the eldest son has been carried to an extreme. The help of your great landed proprietors are brought up in an atmosphere where work is held to be unnecessary and degrading. As a consequence, your aristocracy is made up largely of class idlers, who do nothing for themselves or their country. Some of them, it is true, seek careers in the army or navy, but any kind of business or productive service is foreign to their education.

"The English workingmen have begun to realize the injustice of this inequality of privileges, and strikes and labor troubles are a natural consequence. Evolutions of this kind invariably end in revolution if something is not done to check them, but it is no use wasting time on half-baked insurance bills as a relief for poverty that should not exist. You cannot cure cancer with a lotion; you must remove the cause with a knife.

"Such drastic measures, however, are not probable for some time to come. Englishmen are proverbially slow to act. This is partly due to their veneration for traditions and partly to laziness. Even in your hotels and business houses there is notably a tendency to shirk all duties that are not imperative. Employes show very little interest in their work, and especially no concentration. They exhibit no ambition or desire to rise above their environment, perhaps because they have come to believe that it would be futile.

Organization Lacking.

"The spirit of enterprise is very strong among English business men, but it loses much of its force through the lack of that close organization that not only economizes the cost of production, but insures success through the united and harmonious efforts of the entire staff.

"I do not say these things in any carping spirit of criticism, because I entertain the highest admiration for the British people, for what they have accomplished in the past. The inhabitants of this small group of islands have built up the greatest empire in history, which makes the present signs of decadence all the more to be regretted. Fortunately, your newspapers are alive to the threatening danger, and their influence is tremendous. In fact, I think the newspapers of London are the equal of any in the world."

"Is there any truth in the rumor that you intend establishing a daily newspaper on American lines in London?" was asked.

"None whatever, and for very good reasons. An enterprise of that magnitude would require my close personal attention to be successful, and my interests in the United States keep me tied down so constantly that I can barely manage to get away for a few weeks in the Summer for a much needed rest."

The Hen Problem Worries Solons of Two Nearby Towns

Medford and Everett hens will have to wear licenses if they don't watch out.

The hen problem is vexing the health officers of both cities. They settled it in Melrose by passing an ordinance that hens must be licensed, and only in a certain section at that. A sort of "hen belt" was established.

Medford and Everett have passed ordinances forbidding the keeping of hens under certain conditions. Several owners were cited into court, but were discharged. Now the Medford and Everett Boards of Health are trying to figure out an ordinance that will get by their City Councils and regulate the hen industry at the same time.

ROOSEVELT AND TAFT MEN HAVE SET-TO AT WESTERN CONVENTION

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—Roosevelt supporters among the members of the Republican party county central committee put of rout the supporters of President Taft here amid riotous scenes, which threaten bodily injury to several participants.

F. G. Sanborn, holdover chairman of the committee, a Taft man, was in the chair and called to order the first regular meeting of the committee since the Chicago convention. After one motion had been put before the committee, that apportioning the delegates to the county convention in September, Sanborn declared a hastily put motion for adjournment to be carried, seized his hat and attempted to run from the hall. His object apparently was to choke off the expected resolutions indorsing Roosevelt, which the Roosevelt men, having a majority, could carry.

There were sixty-five of the eighty-six members of the committee present. Fifteen members joined Sanborn in the fortlight and pushed his way toward the door.

Say Edna May's to Be Mother

Wholly Renounces the Stage

MRS. OSCAR LEWISOHN, WHO WAS EDNA MAY, ACTRESS

"My Home and My Husband Fill My Life," She Told Friends.

NEW YORK, July 26.—That Edna May (now Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn) is about to be a mother is a report from England that will have a deep and peculiar interest for the American friends of the former charming actress and her husband. For Edna May has exemplified in an unprecedented way the ability of the star of the stage to renounce her fame—in a measure—and become solely a wife.

Never was there a more charming romance than that of Oscar Lewisohn and the woman whose beauty was so admired, later so missed, by the public.

Returning friends of the couple brought the rumor the other day that a little heir to the Lewisohn millions and the May talent was expected.

Edna May was one of the few actresses to renounce the stage utterly when renouncing it. When she visited New York with her husband last Spring she said:

"The theatre has no more lure for me. I love to go and see others work, but I am no longer one of them, in fact or spirit. I am entirely domesticated. My home and my husband fill my life."

RUSH PLANS FOR T. R. CONVENTION

CHICAGO, July 26.—A big force of clerks will be put at work tomorrow in the national headquarters of the National Progressive party here to make final preparations for the national convention that will meet August 5. Final preparations at the Coliseum, where the convention will be held, are already complete. Extra seats and stands used in the Republican national convention are still in place, and they will be left in the same position for the coming convention. The seating arrangements for delegates will be the same as at the Republican national convention.

The seat sale, which opened yesterday, is fairly brisk, according to those in charge. A number of advance orders have been received and they are being filled today. The Progressive national committee is preparing for a meeting preliminary to the convention to make up a temporary roll. Some contests will be filed with the committee.

Massachusetts Moose today are picking their way in from the Berkshires, from the hill counties, from the Cape and from the shores. For the great herd will gather tomorrow for their first Bay State convention.

The Bull Moose won't be here. But all others are invited. There has been no picking and choosing of delegates. Every Follower of Colonel Roosevelt in the State is urged to come.

Delegates to the National Convention will be picked, eighteen candidates for electors will be nominated and a platform adopted.

WILSON WILL STUMP NATION

SEA GIRT, July 26.—Contrary to his original intention, Governor Wilson will not conduct a stay-at-home campaign, though many of his friends have advised this course. The Governor will profit by the experience of Judge Parker, who, when nominated for the presidency in 1904 remained at Esopus for the better part of the campaign.

The Governor will first go to Maine, where a State election takes place on the first Tuesday in September. With Governor Plaisted, who will undoubtedly be a candidate for re-election, Wilson will make a thorough tour in the hope of carrying Maine. To carry Maine by a substantial vote would be equivalent, it is figured, to a national victory. Maine is generally Republican by a safe margin. Even if Plaisted should be defeated for re-election a good showing would be a hopeful sign. Governor Wilson will probably go to Maine the second or third week in August.

Governor Wilson will deliver an important address in Massachusetts in August.

The first New York speech will be delivered in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, as soon as the Maine election has been disposed of.

Governor Wilson will stump Connecticut with Governor Baldwin. He will tour Missouri with Speaker Clark in order to assure the country that he and his most important convention adversary are on the most friendly terms. The same policy will be pursued with Oscar W. Underwood, only, of course, it will be unnecessary to make a hard fight in so safely a Democratic State as Alabama.

Indiana will be stumped with Governor Marshall, the Vice-presidential nominee. In Ohio Wilson and Governor Harmon will join forces.

Mayor Fitzgerald has sent a telegram to certain Democratic members of the House of Representatives as follows:

Think continuance of Tariff Commission good Democratic doctrine.

Hope you will favor it.

William F. Murray was one of the recipients. The House Democrats are understood to be opposed to the commission.

TAFT REMOVES ROOSEVELT MAN

WASHINGTON, July 26.—President Taft, his speech of acceptance still unfinished, has taken time to remove Joseph O. Thompson, collector of internal revenue for Alabama and Mississippi. Mr. Thompson is the leader of the Roosevelt forces in Alabama. Secretary MacVeagh had requested him to quit. Thompson refused, and with the President's sanction, MacVeagh wired a summary dismissal.

President Taft and Secretary Nagel today put a quietus on the rumor that Napoleon failure to deliver Missouri to the President would cost the Commerce and Labor man his official head. Mr. Nagel will neither resign nor be removed.

William Loeb also, whom Roosevelt called the "peerless secretary," or the "perfect secretary," or something like that, will be loyal to Taft. Rather, he will be loyal by himself and keep his place as Collector in New York. Thus far Mr. Loeb has made no statement except that he will not support Mr. Roosevelt.

President Taft took a lesson from Governor Wilson and notified William H. Miller and Harry M. Daugherty, G. O. P. magnates in Ohio, that they could go ahead and pick their leaders—the head of the State Executive Committee, etc.—without fear of interference from him.

Congressman Robert O. Harris of Brockton is again a candidate in the Fourteenth. Mayor Charles A. Williamson is rumored as a Progressive. An attempt will be made to have the Republican City Committee endorse Williamson.

Colonel Everett C. Benton, candidate for the regular Republican gubernatorial nomination, has issued a statement declaring that he neither expects nor wants any support from the machine, but relies upon the people and the primaries.

FOSS SHOWERED WITH GLASS AS MAN HURLS GREEN APPLE AT CAR

The police today are looking for the man who threw an apple through a window of a Jamaica Plain car as it was passing Roxbury Crossing, showering Governor Foss with glass. The Governor was unhurt.

The Governor, with B. A. Holland, a Chicago hotel salesman, started from their seats. It was this, rising from his seat that prevented the splintered glass doing the Governor any injury.

The thrower of the apple was seen by the motorman standing in the field near the Vinecent Memorial Hospital. The motorman stopped the car and, jumping off, started for the man. He fled down the embankment and disappeared in Leverett Park.

TALES of the TURKISH TROPHIES

TALE 10 - THE BAD IMITATION

"MY next imitation," said the Royal Mimic, "will be that of a Turkish Trophy."

"Watch this," said the Kink, with a sly wink at the Royal Chamberlain. "I am suspicious."

"How did it strike your Majesty?" asked the performer, as he concluded his stunt.

"Punk! Just as I thought," said the Kink. "Turkish Trophies cannot be imitated. Try it again, and you shall read a page of the Congressional Record to your wife, every night for a month."

"Mercy" was a word not to be found in the dark lexicon of the Kink.

A WORD TO PARENTS

Look After Your Child's Health During the Years of Most Rapid Growth.

School children who are nervous, who cannot sit quietly on a chair, who are always dropping things, and perhaps have twitching of the muscles of the face, need Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once.

Growing girls who become pale and thin, who have fickle appetites; who are out of breath after climbing the stairs, and who have palpitation of the heart after the least exertion, need them also.

Parents of such children should not delay the treatment. Nervous children do not develop properly. A sickly girlhood means a sickly womanhood and lack of blood during the years of most rapid growth means flat-chested, listless, ambitionless men and women later on.

Pure, rich, red blood is what is needed. Strength for the nerves follows naturally. The time to correct the need of these is now, before any more harm is done.

Miss Carrie E. Hathaway, of North Houghton street, North Adams, Mass., was cured of anæmia by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after her case was pronounced hopeless by her doctor. The statement of her cure is told by her mother, Mrs. A. A. Hathaway. "My daughter, Carrie, was confined to her bed for two years suffering from anæmia. She seemed to have no blood and was as pale as a ghost. She was thin and did not weigh more than 100 pounds, had no strength or ambition and could not sit up. Her appetite was poor and she had difficulty in breathing. No one expected her to get well and our minister, before going on his vacation, came to bid her goodbye as he did not think she would live until his return. We spent hundreds of dollars but the doctor seemed to be puzzled and could not help her. She had been sick for over two years before I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. The pills gave her quick relief and cured her after a fair trial. She has had no serious sickness since and weighs 170 pounds. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful remedy and I cannot say enough in praise of them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

SEE THE GREEN PARASOL GIRL

Eyes that see not!

This aptly describes the average American man and woman of today. Off to work in the morning with a rush, nose buried in a newspaper, then home the same way at night. The beauties of nature all around us, the multitude of interesting events constantly transpiring and even the people who pass us on the street—all are, unnoticed.

Having the god-given gift of sight how do we use it? By getting just about 10 per cent. efficiency from our eyes. The wonders of the ages are constantly passing in review before us, but most of us have "eyes that see not."

"The Lady with the Green Parasol" will test your powers of observation next Sunday at Revere Beach.

"The Lady with the Green Parasol" will stroll along Ocean avenue, the beach and along the Boulevard, from Condit's Dance Hall to Revere street, between the hours of 2 and 5 p. m., next Sunday.

The man, woman or child who identifies her will receive from her a Boston AMERICAN order for $100 in gold.

The only requirement is that the person who identifies "The Lady with the Green Parasol" have in his or her hand, IN PLAIN SIGHT, a copy of next Sunday's AMERICAN, and shall say to her, "You are the Lady with the Green Parasol."

It should be distinctly understood that she will not hide. She will be in plain view on the streets mentioned—at the time appointed.

Plan your Sunday outing now!

Revere Beach offers attractions as interesting as any in the country, and next Sunday there will be a special reason for going there. The reason is a bag of dollars for someone who goes—$100 in gold.

Nothing but an extremely severe continuous rainstorm, such as we had last Sunday, will prevent her from keeping her appointment.

One hundred dollars awaits some AMERICAN reader. It might just as well be you as your neighbor.

Examine the picture of "The Lady With the Green Parasol" in today's AMERICAN—then decide to at least give Dame Fortune A CHANCE to present you with that bag of gold.

WEAVERS' PLAN MAY END STRIKE

NEW BEDFORD, July 26.—The textile strike will soon be ended, it is believed today, by the substitution of a new grading plan devised by the Weavers' Protective Union. The State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation is considering this today and, if it finds the plan satisfactory, will present it to the Manufacturers' Association.

Frank M. Bump has been delegated by the State Board of Arbitration to do what he can at New Bedford and act as the board's representative. He is endeavoring to arrange a conference between the union weavers and the manufacturers.

The attitude of the manufacturers has not been learned yet. Secretary William O. Devoll of the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' Association refuses to make any statement on behalf of the millmen. It is known, though, that they are meeting informally from time to time and giving careful consideration to the matter. Those close in touch with the situation declare it is most likely the millmen will finally agree to confer and that general opinion is that a meeting of the manufacturers and operatives with the State board will take place the first of next week.

500,000 BOTTLES OF CHAMPAGNE LOST IN FRENCH BLAZE

PARIS, July 26.—A brigadier of police and two other men are buried under the ruins of buildings on the Mercer Champaign estate at Epernay as the result of a fire that burned all night and wiped out most of the buildings, destroying more than 500,000 bottles of champagne. A policeman and seven firemen were injured in the all-night fight against the flames. The loss is over $1,000,000.

ENTHUSIASTIC AT REDMOND'S COMING

Enthusiasm over the coming visit of William Redmond to this country was manifest at a meeting of the Boston branch of the United Irish League held in the American House. Arrangements were begun for the meeting in Tremont Temple on the night of Tuesday, October 1.

FRENCH BATTLESHIP NEAR DESTRUCTION

TOULON, France, July 26.—The French battleship Mirabeau narrowly escaped destruction in the recent naval manoeuvres when her magazine was set afire by short circuited wires, it became known today. The captain's promptitude in having the magazine flooded alone averted the destruction of the ship.

BIRDS MOVE IN AT NEW ZOO

The municipal Zoo at Franklin Park is rapidly being stocked in preparation for the formal opening on Labor Day. A large number of birds have just been released in the aviary, including several specimens of rare eurik cranes from Egypt, huge birds of a slate color, standing nearly six feet tall; a flock of African flamingoes, with wings of a delicate pink color tipped with black beneath; black swans from Germany, white peacocks from China, black European storks, crown cranes from India, Egyptian geese, demoiselle cranes, European sandbills, pelicans from Egypt, cereopsis geese from Africa, Australian wild geese, Florida pelicans, green-winged teal and ducks.

A crowd of several hundred children surrounding the big cage cheered as soon as each small cage was opened and the occupants released. They laughed with glee as some of the ungainly flamingoes and pelicans waddled to the edge of the pool or toppled over in their haste to reach it. As each specimen was released it took a survey of its surroundings, inspecting every nook and cranny of its future home, enjoyed a shower bath in the central fountain and then settled down to being on exhibition.

RED SOX ON ROAD TODAY TO START INVASION OF WEST

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

CHAMPION JOHNSON DEMANDS $30,000 TO MEET JEANNETTE

Listening for News of the Red Sox Pennant Express — By Hal Coffman

PENNANT ROAD, WESTERN BRANCH

RILEY'S COLUMN

WITH a change of scene, the Red Sox have hopes of boosting their batting and regaining the trifling loss they sustained by the double defeat at the hands of the Cleveland team. The Sox are on their way to Chicago today, and they were a happy bunch when they boarded the train. Jimmy McAleer was with them and he was glad to get away, too. The strain of keeping the pennant lead has worn on him as much as on the players.

"WE have fallen off in our batting the past two weeks, and I'm glad we're getting away," said "Mack." "The change of scene will do the boys good. They have been under a great strain, and have been winning four out of five games right along from the toughest teams in the league, by the hardest work and without batting. I look for them to fall into a batting streak soon after they're away."

* * *

THE Sox have been fortunate in having a pitching corps that stood up under the strain of having to win these games without much batting behind them. But the pitchers began to show signs of going "stale" this week. They began to grow irritable, although none of them has been required to work more than one full game a week and, now and then, two.

* * *

IT is a tremendous job to gain and keep a lead in the big leagues. The competition is terrific. The players have to be on edge every moment. In other sports the athlete works not more than half a dozen times a year to supreme tests, while baseball teams that aspire to league championships have to work at top speed in every game, because the other fellow is pressing them all of the time. It finally "gets on their nerves."

* * *

JAKE STAHL, who warned his team against thinking of pennants the day they worked into the lead at St. Louis in June, has been keyed up to the highest pitch ever since then and has carried the American League pennant to bed with him every night, figuratively speaking, until even Jake—who is considered stolid by spectators—began to give way. That is the real reason why the "born manager" fell in the pennant race when he had the Washington team out in front on the only tour of duty he ever did as manager before.

THAT is probably why Hank O'Day, who had the Cincinnati Reds in the van for a long time, has gone to pieces. Connie Mack and "Muggsy" McGraw stand it because they have been at the top by such wide margins and for such a long time that they have built up machines that work for them. But even Mack is under a terrific strain right now, and McGraw has to keep tinkering with his machine to keep it where it belongs. Let Mathewson and Marquard go wrong for any considerable time and see what happens to McGraw.

JIMMY CALLAHAN fought his White Sox into the lead and kept them there for a long time, after which Callahan went to pieces. Jimmy became mean and irritable, lost his own speed and finally let his machine become out of order all along the line, until now it has dropped into fourth place, and threatens to remain there.

* * *

THE Red Sox fought their way into the lead, inch by inch, but they were able to gain not more than a half a game or a game a week. Tuesday night they were eight full games in front of Washington, that margin having been acquired by being "on their toes" every minute. Then came the crash. They lost a half game of their lead by their defeat at the hands of Cleveland, when Washington could not play. They regained that half game when the Senators lost the first to Detroit yesterday, but then lost a full game when the "Naps" beat them, 1 to 0, and the Senators beat Detroit in the second struggle. Therefore, they went west a full seven games to the good.

THE game they lost to Cleveland was heart-breaking because Ray Collins pitched well enough to win nine out of ten baseball games, just as "Buck" O'Brien did when "Big Ed" Walsh beat him, 1 to 0, a week ago. The "Naps" made but seven hits off Collins. But Vean Gregg, the left-handed wonder of last year, has been gradually acquiring his old-time speed and yesterday had it going top-notch. The Sox batters were hitting at them after they were in the catcher's mitt and made only four safe ones off the tall Oregon farmer.

THEY saw they could not win with the clouting game, and they tried bunting. They accumulated two hits that way and with only one out in the seventh had Speaker on third and Lewis on second, but Stahl and Wagner both struck out, and the last hope was gone. That was when Gregg was "burning them over" so fast that Jake and "Heinie" were waving at the air when O'Neil had the ball. That test told on Gregg just as much as a hundred yards in 9 3-5 seconds will tell on a sprinter, and he won't work up to that speed again for a week.

THE Pilgrims are back today after a heart-breaking journey of their own, in which they lost more games by one run than it ever falls to the lot of big league tail-enders to suffer. While they were defeated day after day, they were beaten by such small margins for a long time that they broke into Boston today with the feeling that they had won some "moral victories," anyway. "Moral victories" don't count in the percentage column but they please the crowds that witness the games, and if it were not for the crowds there wouldn't be any "big league" baseball. The Pilgrims face the Cardinals for an opener.

WILSON LOSES TO YOUNG M'DONOUGH

NEW BEDFORD, July 26.—Young McDonough of Manchester, N. H., defeated Bobby Wilson, the Canadian lightweight champion, in a twelve-round bout here. McDonough assumed the aggressive and boxed in championship style. Wilson's blows were solid and carried great weight, but failed to score as often as the Manchester boxer.

RED SOX HAVE A DAY OF REST

This is an off day for the Red Sox, who are spending a greater part of the day traveling toward the West.

Last night Manager Stahl, nineteen players and little Jerry McCarthy, the mascot, left for Chicago, and it is expected that they will arrive in the land of the White Sox late tonight.

They hold the lead by seven games and are in the best of trim and confident of making a satisfactory showing during the second Western trip, during which they will play sixteen games, four with each of the teams on that circuit.

Larry Gardner, who saw yesterday's game from a box, will play tomorrow. The only players left at home were Bradley and Thomas.

The Speed Boys were compelled to accept another defeat at the hands of the Naps yesterday, because of the superior brand of twirling they faced.

Vean Gregg, the classy southpaw of the Naps, was in real form, which meant a battle all the way to the finish. His control was perfect, his curves of the puzzling type. He fanned six and passed but one, while all the hits the Speed Boys could get were four. Two of these came in the fourth, being wasted, as were those in the seventh.

Collins, the side-wheeler for Boston, was hit hard and often, the outfield backing him up finely. Of the putouts, these three men totaled ten.

UMPIRES ARE BAD RISK.

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., July 26.—The danger of bats, bricks, fists and bottles makes the baseball umpire the most odious of all risks to the life insurance companies of the country.

Red Held of the Connecticut League wanted some financial protection and he tried nearly every company in the country without results until this week, when a Hartford company, at a special rate, took his case.

Baseball News and Gossip

The Pittsburg team thinks a little of the Boston Pilgrims after those tough games played this week. The Pittsburg scribes think that if Fred Clark's men had used as much energy against the Giants as they were forced to to defeat the Pilgrims, the Giants would have left the Smoky City with a few more dents in their reputation. This goes to show what kind of ball the Pilgrims are playing, but still they continue to lose by a small margin.

It is reported in Pittsburgh that Marty O'Toole, the South Framingham boy, is very nervous and that the strain of battle is telling on him. Several times Marty has been yanked out of the box, and this worries him more than a little. Marty does not possess the confidence in himself that he did two months ago and is of a much more nervous disposition.

* * *

There doesn't seem much of a chance for "Doc" Miller, the former Pilgrim player, to break in as a regular in the Phillies' outfield. Cravath seems to have his job clinched and riveted. It was the plan of Manager Dooin, when he made the trade, to put Miller in play instead of Cravath, but the latter has been hitting the ball at a terrific clip lately and will more than probably stick.

If Manager Dooin had not taken Cravath's word early this Spring, the great slugger might again be back in the minors. Cravath has been given several tryouts in the big leagues and each time was sent back to the smaller leagues after a few tryouts in the Spring. When Dooin signed the slugger, Cravath asked the manager to allow him to stay for a couple of months at least, giving the reason as he never did start his batting until the season was well under way. In the early season Cravath was used but little, but when the season had got well under way he was put in and he stayed. Dooin promised and kept his word and Cravath fulfilled his word.

Five young men, Moeller in right field and Shanks in left, Gandil at first, Morgan at second and Foster at third base, have put Washington into the runner-up position, and made the team that was for years the joke of organized baseball a strong contender. Full of ambition and gifted with speed and ability, this quintet, aided by a somewhat veteran backstop staff, a great shortstop of major league experience and an outfielder who also attained the rank of star and still holds a big reputation, just enough experienced men to balance the new-comers, this team is today the sensation of baseball.

Clarke Griffith, the swarthy baseball tactician, who was known to have the ability, but somehow or other has failed to put it into successful use for several years, is the right man in the right place at the head of the youthful Washington outfit. Griffith was the needed link to a good baseball machine.

* * *

Earl Moore has at last struck his stride and is twirling gilt-edged ball for Red Dooin's Phillies. Moore got off with a rush in 1911 and pitched the Quakers to the front in the National League. He was invincible for a while and the Phillies' adherents had visions of a pennant until Moore "cracked." Earl got away to a poor start this season, but he appears to be cherry ripe now.

* * *

There are half a dozen battles waging in the big leagues, all of them more or less interesting, but none involving a championship. About the hardest of them are the efforts of the Athletics and the Pirates to oust Washington and Chicago, respectively, from second place. Philadelphia and Cincinnati are wrangling over fourth rating in the National, but the Reds are so far gone that soon they'll be devoting most of their time to keeping the Cardinals down in sixth place.

According to dispatches from the front McGraw has decided to make an outfielder of young Robertson, who came to him as a pitcher. The young man is a natural hitter, but has not shown more than ordinary ability as a pitcher since joining the squad. He played first base part of one game at the Polo Grounds, it will be remembered.

* * *

Josh Devore's lay-off seems to have done him a world of good. He has been hitting consistently well ever since he broke back into the game.

Connie Mack is quoted as saying that the Giants will just breeze to the finish in the National League race, and win another pennant by a margin of twenty games or so. The manager of the world's champions is more optimistic than some of the fans in New York.

* * *

The Cleveland Naps have purchased Billy Hunter and Clarence Kraft, outfielders of the Flint, Mich., club of the South Michigan League, for $2,500. Kraft was tried out as a pitcher by the Cleveland club in 1911, but was turned over to Toledo. He recently made eight home runs in nine days.

* * *

It is said that Barney Dreyfuss, the owner of the Pittsburg club, denounced Marty O'Toole after he was defeated by the Giants, and declared that he could give three bases on balls in one inning himself and that he did not need to pay big money for pitchers to do it.

Marshall Now Leads in Big Chess Tourney

American Champion Has Five Games to His Credit in Match at Breslau.

BRESLAU, July 26.—By virtue of his victory over the St. Petersburg player, Lewitzky, and because of the fact that his principal rival, A. K. Rubinstein, of Warsaw, could do no more than draw with the Leipsic master, Mieses, Frank J. Marshall, the American champion, assumed the lead at the conclusion of the sixth round of the international tournament, which is now being played under the auspices of the German Chess Association in this city. This round also provided quite a sensation by the brilliant victory, which the Munich gladiator, D. Prezepiorka, achieved when opposed to the resourceful expert, O. S. Duras, of Prague. The latter had the white pieces and, try as he would, he could not prevent a well-aimed attack in the middle game and he had finally to accept defeat.

The other results were: Teichmann and Carls drew, Breyer and Balla also divided honors, as did Schlechter and Tarrasch.

The records to date:

Marshall	5	1	Duras	3	3
Rubinstein	4½	1½	Spielmann	2½	3½

New Fight Law Would Jail Newspaper Men

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 26.—The amended anti-prize fight petition, rejected by the County Clerk because of irregularities, has been presented to that official again. It bears 3,000 names.

The provisions of the proposed law would make every one connected with a ring battle, from the most unimportant helper about the training quarters, guilty of a felony and liable to imprisonment in the penitentiary. This also would include newspaper men who worked on the fight story.

SISTER DEFEATS SISTER.

BETHLEHEM, N. H., July 26.—The semi-final round in the women's golf tournament, which was played on the Bethlehem links, resulted in a victory for Miss Helen Sayer, Brooklyn, over her sister, Miss Lesley Sayer, by 1 up, an extra hole being necessary to decide the match. Miss H. Sayer's opponent in the 18-hole final tomorrow is Mrs. H. L. Jillson, Pinehurst, who defeated Miss A. L. Wilkie, Florida Country, 3 and 2.

Yankees Sell Street to Providence Club

Famous Backstop Goes Back to Minors—Came to New York from Washington.

New York's Yankees and the American League lost one of its most picturesque characters when Catcher Charles Street was sold to Providence, of the International League.

"Gabby," as this backstop was called by the profession, joined New York last Winter in a trade for Shortstop Jack Knight. It was the first trade made by Manager Wolverton, and naturally aroused a great deal of speculation.

As it turned out neither side was "gold-bricked." Knight preceded Street to the minors. He was sold by Washington about a month ago.

Three years ago Street was recognized as the greatest catcher in the American League. With Walter Johnson the speed merchant of the Senators, he composed one of the most famous batteries of the past decade. He was a wonderful backstop, a deadly thrower and a terrific hitter. But he was afflicted by a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism and never fully recovered his effectiveness.

Street sprang into fame as a partner of Walter Johnson. But he was not content to let it go at that. One morning four years ago he startled the sporting world by catching a baseball tossed from the top of the Washington Monument in the Capital City.

JOHNSON PUTS A CHAUFFEUR OUT

CHICAGO, July 26.—Jack Johnson, the pugilist, knocked out Homer Kerchfield, a negro chauffeur, whom Johnson declares he caught in front of his (Johnson's) saloon attempting to take an extra tire from his automobile, and who, when ordered away, struck Johnson several blows in the face. Later Johnson caused Kerchfield's arrest.

NEW LEAGUE DATES.

LENOX, July 26.—The managers of the Central Berkshire Baseball League have arranged the following schedule of games to be played in the different towns making up the league: July 27, Stockbridge at Lenox; August 3, Stockbridge at Lee; August 10, Lenox at Stockbridge; August 17, Lee at Lenox; August 24, Stockbridge at Lee; August 31, Lenox at Lee; September 2 (Labor day), Lee at Lenox (morning), Lee at Stockbridge (afternoon); September 7, Stockbridge at Lenox.

JOHNSON ASKS $30,000 TO MEET JEANNETTE

NEW YORK, July 26.—If Billy Gibson, manager of the Garden Athletic Club, will lay $30,000 in Jack Johnson's lap the champion will mingle with our own colored bruiser, Joe Jeannette, here on Labor Day.

The promoter and Johnson had a little gab fest over the long distance phone, "Artha" chirping from the Windy City end.

"What will your price be for a ten-round fight with Joe Jeannette?" Gibson asked.

"Thirty thousand dollars, Mr. Gibs'n," came the reply.

"That is a little too steep for me, but if you make it $20,000 you are on."

"No," said Johnson, "I must have my price, or otherwise I will accept the offer of Mr. McIntosh for three fights in Australia. I would not waste time stopping here for a smaller amount, and then you have picked out a tough man for me."

Manager Gibson asked for a little time to figure the big demand, as he thought the amount was a bit too much for the battle, and did not want the club to go in a hole after having a fairly successful season.

Johnson Likes Palzer.

During the conversation Johnson asked Gibson how Al Palzer would do for a drawing card. Gibson told the champion that Palzer was not seasoned enough to be given a chance, and the public would not look upon the match as anything like an even thing.

It is generally understood that Boxing Commissioner O'Neill is opposed to a white man fighting Johnson in New York fearing that it would put the game in a bad light.

Dan McKetrick, manager of Jeannette, and Billy Gibson will leave for Chicago today where they will hold a conference with Johnson and possibly a compromise will be made, and Gibson will come home with the champion's signature to a set of articles. If he is successful the battle will take place on Labor Day, Monday, September 2.

Little Chance for Jeannette.

Johnson and Jeannette have battled seven times. The best the latter could do on these occasions was to get a ten-round draw with Johnson when they boxed at Portland, Me.

In one of their Philadelphia bouts Johnson lost on a foul in the second round, Jeannette claiming that Johnson hit low while the men were at close quarters.

Little chance is conceded Jeannette in a short bout with the champion, even though Johnson is not quite as fast as he was when the men fought their other engagements.

In a long distance bout Jeannette's wonderful endurance and ability to assimilate hard punishment would give him a chance, but as ten rounds would be the limit many close students of the game give Jeannette little chance of copping first money.

Two World's Bike Records Are Broken

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 25.—Two world's bicycle records were broken here. "Jackie" Clarke reduced the one-third mile professional against time from 33 1-5 to 33 seconds and Alfred Goullett cut his own one-mile human-paced professional against time record from 1m. 46 1-5s. to 1m. 39 3-5s., using seven pacemakers.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

The Terror Beasts By Garrett P. Serviss

Monsters of Teutonic folk-lore belittled by fossils found in Germany

NEAR the old city of Halberstadt, famous among travelling Americans for its beautiful specimens of ancient wooden architecture, there has lately been discovered, in digging for brick clay, a cemetery of extinct monsters, of the tribe of the dinosaurs, which has not only aroused the enthusiasm of German paleontologists (a paleontologist is one who studies the life and remains of ancient creatures of the earth), but has also attracted the special attention of the Emperor, who, delighted with Mr. Carnegie's gift of a plaster-of-paris model of the gigantic American diplodocus, is now pleased to find that German soil is capable of showing up something of the same kind, if not of equal magnitude.

The photographs reproduced herewith enable the reader to understand the startling nature of such discoveries. To see the enormous feet and claws of these monsters suddenly protruding from the ground, as it is opened up at a great depth in the peaceful pursuit of clay digging, is an experience calculated to thrill the nerves of the most indifferent onlooker. One can comprehend the enthusiasm of the paleontologist when such a discovery is made. Their delight is of a higher order than that of the gold-seeker when his pick discloses a huge nugget or prodigious vein. They are digging up history which is millions of years old. They are discovering the old earth as it was in the days of the flying dragons. They are treading upon some of the very soil that was trod by the monsters themselves.

A gigantic skeleton foot of a dinosaur.

One of the dinosaur skeletons recovered and set up in the museum.

Excavated bones ready for removal.

The Dinosaur

Let us consider the dinosaur. He was the wonder of the plant in his time. His modern name means "terrible lizard," from the Greek words DEINOS, "terrible," and SAUROS, "lizard," because he had some of the physical characteristics of the innocent little lizard of our day. Sometimes, in some of his forms, he attained an almost unbelievable stature. The diplodocus was seventy-five or eighty feet long, and thirty feet tall. Others were probably as large, such as the brontosaurus, "thunder lizard," from BRONTES, "a clash." These last creatures, varying in size, but always terrible in appearance, were scattered widely over the earth in very ancient times. They have been found in America, Europe and Africa, but so far as we know at present, the American species held the precedent in size.

But so much would not be gained for knowledge if the paleontologists were content simply to dig out the remains of these frightful beasts, and to put their skeletons together and set them up to be gazed at in museums. The most astonishing discoveries have been made by studying their body structure, and comparing it with that of other animals. Thus it was found that some of these gigantic creatures were apparently predecessors of the bird. Some of them had feet like those of birds, perhaps they bore resemblances to the modern ostrich. Afterward there arose theories of birds which had jaws and teeth, showing their reptilian origin.

Wonderful Bones

One of the most significant facts about the dinosaurs is that some of the largest of them had bones filled with cavities, the apparent reason for which was to insure relative lightness together with strength. Nature knew the great strength of a solid tube before man had reasoned it.

A dinosaur with hollow bones could grow to a great size without becoming so weighty that he could not run. Some scientists believe that the running birds of today were derived from some of these creatures. The real flying dragons of ancient times (and the remains of some have been found in the rocks) were not of great size—but their ancestors may have been veritable giants, though unable to lift themselves from the ground.

One of the things which most strikes the mind in studying these creatures of the past is the evidence that nature, as well as man, proceeds by means of experiment. She has not developed her creatures suddenly, full formed, but by long processes of evolution. There is no evidence that man-like animals lived in the time of the dinosaurs. Those giants were then the masters of the earth. They had small brains, but big bodies. Yet they had SOME brain, and they form an unquestionable link in the chain of life upon this globe.

Never was the power of the human intellect better displayed than in the forecast which the great French naturalist Cuvier made concerning the former existence of gigantic reptiles, such as the dinosaurs. Cuvier declared, as the result of his studies, that there had been a period when our planet was inhabited by reptiles "of an appalling magnitude," possessing many of the features of modern quadrupeds. Almost nobody believed him. People thought he was drawing too much upon his imagination. But he knew that the imagination, when kept under proper control, is the surest guide to new knowledge, and it was not long before discoveries were made which fully established the truth of his opinion, and then all men of science recognized the fact that there had been an "age of reptiles." It was during this age that the dinosaurs flourished, and every stroke of the pick disclosing a giant skeleton in the diggings at Halberstadt is a fresh confirmation of the foresight of Cuvier, which that of one of his wonderful post chapter in the history of the earth stone before his masterful mind.

It's a Hard Life

AND THERE'S NO USE DENYING IT

By WEX JONES

SO far as my observation of jobs goes, the principal thing about them is that they last remarkably quick.

One job is a stepping stone to another. I just get time for two steps: I step in and I step out.

Sometimes I don't even get a chance to step out—I'm lifted out.

However, this borders on philosophy or something of that kind, and the autobiography of Thomas Tattmore must deal with action rather than thought.

After my job with the hypnotist, a job for which I received nothing but ridicule and five days on the stone pile, I was out in the cold world again. The Summer was going fast and it looked as if I wouldn't get any Summer job until December, if then. So I hustled around for all I was worth. Everybody I met I asked for a job, and finally one old fellow looked at me in an earnest manner and remarked: "You're not much on looks, but I suppose I'll have to take the best I can get. Yes, young man, I will give you a position. You will have free board in my Summer hotel, free laundry, and all that, and $10 a week.

"Sounds good," said I. "What do I have to do?"

"Nothing," replied the old chap.

"Sounds great," said I; "but why offer all this to me?"

"I have no Summer man at my hotel," the old man replied. All girls, and scores of 'em. You're to be the man. They'll try to flirt with you, but there's no going of 'em that you can't get seriously compromised. Otherwise I shouldn't think of asking a young fellow to take the job."

I couldn't get up to the Hotel Thermometer quick enough. All the way up in the train I had visions of black-haired girls, brown-haired girls, golden-crested girls and all kinds of girls, all crowding around me on the hotel piazza. One of them would beg me to go canoeing; another would want me to play tennis—it was an enticing picture.

I got to the Thermometer after dinner that evening and went straight to my room, not, however, without catching a glimpse of a dozen of girls dancing in couples on the piazza. "They'll tear me to pieces between 'em," I thought to myself, "if I ever venture into one of their dances. Each one will want me for a partner."

That evening I could hear two silvery voices chattering across the corridor.

"What do you think, Sylvia," said one voice—"a man came tonight."

"Pooh, I knew that before he left the station," responded the other voice. "I'm going to capture him, too."

My dreams that night were filled with delightful visions of sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks. I was the star in a garden party.

Next morning I arose and dressed myself very carefully. I went down to breakfast. All eyes were upon me during the meal and despite my sweet faint and general all-around savvy I couldn't help blushing. In fact I blushed so much I thought I would burn my clothes off.

After breakfast I went out on the piazza. I was all ready for the rush. There was a little blue-eyed girl that I hoped would lead it.

Five minutes went by, but nobody came my way. "I must give them a little time to enter up 'courses,'" I thought.

To make a long story short, I sat on the piazza all morning, and the only person who spoke to me was an old lady who came up and asked me what I meant by taking her chair.

Next day it was the same.

I thought I looked too austere, perhaps, so next day I smiled winningly at several groups. They all got up and moved around to the other side of the hotel.

That night I dreamed I was marooned on a desert island, where ships passed every minute without paying any heed to my signals of distress.

The next morning people began to leave the hotel.

The next day the proprietor telegraphed me that he would give me $50 to leave his hotel immediately, before his Summer trade was ruined.

The next day I left.

Later I found out that a rumor had spread through the hotel that I was a detective sent up to gather evidence by the Anti-Turkey Trot Society.

The Latest Dances and How to Dance Them

"The Madrillanna"

By MAURICE

A BRAND new Summer dance for those who wish to be up-to-date in the ballroom.

Miss Walton and I believe that this latest dance is a solution of the vexing question of modern dances. The modern dance to be popular must combine new features and get as far away as possible from the old waltz and twostep. On the other hand it should be as far removed from the Grizzly Bear, the Turkey Trot and other contortions of the kind, which have brought many of the present dances into irregute.

I have christened this new dance "The Madrillanna." It has a wave-like rhythmic sway, and I believe it is going to capture society here just as it has the expert and beautiful dancers in Paris ballrooms who come to me to be taught this latest combination of certain steps of the Tango and the four-step waltz.

One of the novel features of the dance is that throughout its entire duration the girl has a position with her back to her partner. At times the man also turns his back, and as shown in the picture of the end of the dance, they glide over the floor back to back.

Easy Rhythm

Ordinarily the girl's back alone is turned; she is in front of her partner and this position is particularly adapted for obtaining graceful and artistic effects in the long wave-like glides which characterize the Madrillanna.

This position also makes it possible for the man to drive or steer the girl and the couple are enabled to dance in better rhythm and more closely in time and in step. I have not danced this dance in public at all as yet, and the people of New York will be the first to see it. Indeed, it would not have become public except that the other day the Maharajah of Kapurthala gave a luncheon at his hotel. As every one knows, he is a great lover of good dancing and he had heard that I had invented something new, so he requested Miss Walton and me to dance it for his guests. Of course, we complied and the enthusiasm and praise which we received by such people as the Grand Duke Boris of Russia and his mother, the Grand Duchess Vindimir, the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, the Princess Louis d'Orleans Braganza and the Prince and Princess Ghika, with other titled guests, make us believe that the Madrillanna is bound to be a popular success.

Now as to the dance itself. It is done to a slow waltz and the partners take position, as shown in the first picture, the girl with her back to the man. A couple of good dancers can make a poem of the first pose, and throughout the dance this position leads itself much more to pretty poses and to interesting facial expressions than does the ordinary dance position, where the two partners look into each other's eyes, or gaze over each other's shoulder.

In the first position the man has his right arm about the waist of the girl and holds his left arm outstretched, grasping her hand. Her right hand may be on his hand at her waist or gracefully balanced with outstretched arm. The arm must not be held in a stiff or awkward manner and should wave gracefully with an undulating movement of the waltz.

Some Tango Steps

The couple take four steps to the right.
Four steps to the left.
Four steps again to the right.
Four steps forward.
Each set of four steps must end with the right foot in the air.

This centre picture shows a position when Tango steps are taken. The girl holds both arms outstretched, the man clasping her hands. The steps are double two-steps, with a bend of the knee and of the arms at the same time.

Throughout the entire dance the girl has her back to her partner.

A position particularly adapted for obtaining graceful effects.

This is followed by five steps of the Tango for eight measures of the music.

With the Tango steps the girl holds both arms stretched out, the man clasping her hands, and the steps are the double two-steps with a bend of the knee and of the arms at the same time.

The first five steps of the Tango to the right.

Three steps of the Tango to the left.

Repeat the Tango steps for eight more bars.

Then some sixteen measures of a four-step waltz, resolving into the three-step Tango movement with the bending of the foot at the beginning of the bar.

All the movements are taken in a wave-like, swaying manner, the girl bending with each step while the partner steadies her, bending with her at the same time.

The last measures of the dance are done back to back, the steps being those of the Tango, but in reverse position.

The Madrillanna has all the possibilities of grace and beauty of action. Good dancers will make a sensation with it, and I predict for it a tremendous amount of success. It cannot be cheapened or vulgarized, and it must be danced well and gracefully or not at all.

WILL SOCIETY DANCE 'EM?

An English artist suggests some startling new terpsichorean effects which make the "Bunny Hug" and the "Turkey Trot" seem tame by comparison.

Fittings in Advance

NEARLY twelve years the house had been to let, and the house agent was in despair. It was the old, old tale of its being haunted, and tenants simply wouldn't look at it.

At last the agent bit upon a brilliant idea. He equipped every room with elaborate gas fittings, not only to make them look smart, but to frighten away the ghosts.

A week elapsed, and a rumor reached him that some one had been after the house. He hurried off to the housekeeper of the mansion.

"This is splendid!" he gasped breathlessly to the latter. "I hear that some one has taken the house. Is that so?"

"I'm sure I don't know, sir," replied the housekeeper. "Some one's taken the gas fittings, and perhaps he'll come back for the house!"

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as a new drug, otaine—double strength, has been discovered that positively removes these homely spots.

Simply get one ounce othine—double strength, from Houghton & Dutton Drug Co., Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., and apply a little of it at night, and in the morning you will see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Do You Know That—

The boundary line between Canada and the United States is marked with posts at mile intervals for a great part of its length. Cairns, earth-mounds and timber posts are also used, and through the forests and swamps a line, a rod wide, clear of trees and underwood, has been cut. Across the lake artificial islands support the cairns, which rise about eight feet above the high water mark.

Captain A. C. Caines of Swansea, Wales, has invented a safety vessel which he claims to be unsinkable. The model, which has taken him a year or more to construct, shows a kind of airtight belt round the hull of the craft. The belt, which brings out the hull in a curve, consists of a range of airtight compartments along the whole length, and the inventor claims that if the ship were cut in two it could not sink.

Kitchen Wrinkles

When making paperhanger's paste a little soda should be put in. This prevents spiders and insects from eating the paste. Too much soda will take the color out of the paper.

Keep white paper on each shelf of the refrigerator. It gives a clean appearance and keeps things from dropping on the shelf below.

To bring the whites of eggs quickly to a stiff froth, add two or three drops of lemon juice to them. You will then see that they will froth up beautifully in a few minutes.

Make two incisions on the top of all meat pies to allow the steam to escape. Pies treated in this manner will keep good for several days, and so avoid ptomaine poisoning.

Lacquered brass can be most satisfactorily cleaned with a mixture of sour milk and salt. It is best to dissolve the salt in a small portion of the milk to prevent it scratching.

To clean white paint there is nothing to equal a flannel wrung out in warm water and dipped in whiting, using as much as will cling to the flannel. Lastly, wash well in clean water and wipe dry.

A Thrilling Mystery of Modern Times

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

GEORGE ANDERSON, a young business man, and his wife, are passing the entrance to the Hotel Clermont when they notice a man washing his hands in the snow. They enter the hotel and hear that Miss Edith Challoner, an heiress, has been mysteriously murdered. The Andersons tell of the mysterious stranger to Slater, the hotel manager, and Detective Sweetwater, who is called in on the case. A diagram of the hotel lobby shows that the murderer probably stood at the foot of a staircase leading from the musicians' gallery. The man under suspicion is Orlando Brotherson, an eccentric inventor. At breakfast the next morning Mrs. Anderson tells her husband she believes Miss Challoner committed suicide.

"I KNOW it sounds foolish, but the alternative is so improbable. A family like that cannot be leagued together in a conspiracy to hide the truth concerning a matter so serious. To be sure, they may all be short-sighted, or so little given to observation that they didn't see what passed before their eyes. The boys look wide-awake enough, but who can tell? I would sooner believe that"——

I stopped short so suddenly that George looked startled. My attention had been caught by something new I saw in the mirror upon which my attention was fixed. A man was looking in from the corridor behind, at the four persons we were just discussing. He was watching them intently, and I thought I knew his face.

Hideously Homely

"What kind of a looking person was the man who took you outside last night?" I inquired of George, with my eyes still on this furtive watcher.

"A fellow to make you laugh. A perfect character, Laura; hideously homely, but agreeable enough. I took quite a fancy to him. Why?"

"I am looking at him now."

"Very likely. He's deep in this affair. Just an everyday detective, but ambitious, I suppose, and quite alive to the importance of being thorough."

"He is watching those people. No, he isn't. How quickly he disappeared?"

"Yes, he's mercurial in all his movements. Laura, we must get out of this. There happens to be something else in the world for me to do than to sit around and follow up murder clews.

But we began to doubt if others agreed with him when, on passing out, we were stopped in the lobby by this same detective, who had something to say to George and drew him quickly aside.

"What does he want?" I asked, as soon as George had returned to my side.

"He wants me to stand ready to obey any summons the police may send me."

"Then they still suspect Brotherson?"

"They must."

My head rose a trifle as I glanced up at George.

The Old Detective

"Then we are not altogether out of it," I emphasized, complacently.

He smiled—which hardly seemed apropos. Why does George sometimes smile when I am in my most serious moods.

As we stepped out of the hotel, George gave my arm a quiet pinch which served to direct my attention to an elderly gentleman who was just alighting from a taxicab at the curb. He moved heavily and with some appearance of pain, but from the crowd collected on the sidewalk, many of whom nudged each other as he passed, he was evidently a person of some importance, and as he disappeared within the hotel entrance I asked George who this kind-faced, bright-eyed old gentleman could be.

He appeared to know, for he told me at once that he was Detective Gryce, a man who had grown old in solving just such baffling problems as this.

"He gave up work some time ago, I have been told," my husband went on; "but evidently a great case still has its allurement for him. The trail here must be a very blind one for them to call him in. I wish we had not left so soon. It would have been quite an experience to see him at work."

"I doubt if you would have been given the opportunity. I noticed that we were slightly de trop toward the last."

"I wouldn't have minded that: not on my own account, that is. It might not have been pleasant for you. However, the office is waiting. Come, let me put you on the car."

That night I bided his coming with an impatience I could not control. He was late, of course, but when he did appear I almost forgot our usual greeting in my hurry to ask him if he had seen the evening papers.

A Little Chat

"No," he grumbled, as he hung up his overcoat. "Been pushed about all day. No time for anything."

"Then let me tell you"——

But he would have dinner first.

However, a little later we had a comfortable chat. Mr. Gryce had made a discovery, and the papers were full of it. It was one which gave me a small triumph over George. The suggestion he had laughed at was not so entirely foolish as he had been pleased to consider it. But let me tell the story of that day, without further reference to myself.

THE FAMOUS OLD DETECTIVE APPEARS ON THE SCENE

I asked George who this kind-faced, bright-eyed old gentleman could be. He told me at once that he was Detective Gryce.

(Posed by members of "The Rosemaid" Company. Vincent Sullivan (Anderson), Miss Perle Barti (Mrs. Anderson), and R. E. Graham (Detective Gryce).

The opinion had become quite general with those best acquainted with the details of this affair, that the mystery was one of those abnormal ones for which no solution would ever be found, when the aged detective showed himself in the building and was taken to the room, where an inspector of police awaited him. Their greeting was cordial, and the lines on the latter's face relaxed a little as he met the still bright eye of the man upon whose instinct and judgment so much reliance had always been placed.

"This is very good of you," he began, glancing down at the aged detective's bundled up legs, and gently pushing a chair towards him. "I know that it was a great deal to ask, but we're at our wits' end, and so I telephoned. It's the most inexplicable—There! You have heard that phrase before. But clews—there are absolutely none. That is, we have not been able to find any. Perhaps you can. At least that is what we hope. I've known you more than once to succeed where others have failed."

The elderly man thus addressed glanced down at his legs, now propped up on a stool which some one had brought him, and smiled, with the pathos of the old who sees the interests of a lifetime slipping gradually away.

"I am not what I was. I can no longer get down on my hands and knees to pick up threads from the nap of a rug, or spy out a spot of blood in the crimson woof of a carpet."

"You shall have Sweetwater here to do the active work for you. What we want of you is the directing mind—the infallible instinct. It's a case in a thousand, Gryce. We've never had anything just like it. You've never had anything at all like it. It will make you young again."

"A Tough One"

"Yet they swear up and down that nobody crossed the room toward Miss Challoner."

"So they tell me."

"She fell just a few feet from the desk where she had been writing. No word, no cry, just a collapse and sudden fall. In olden days they would have said, struck by a bolt from heaven. But it was a bolt which drew blood: not much blood, I hear, but sufficient to end life almost instantly. She never looked up or spoke again. What do you make of it, Gryce?"

"Its a tough one, and I'm not ready to venture an opinion yet. I should like to see the desk you speak of and the spot where she fell."

A young fellow who had been hovering in the background at once stepped forward. He was the plain-faced detective who had spoken to George.

"Will you take my arm, sir?"

Mr. Gryce's whole face brightened. This Sweetwater, as they call him, was, as I have understood, one of his proteges and more or less of a favorite.

The old man's eyes shot fire, and unconsciously one foot slipped to the floor. Then he bethought himself and painfully lifted it back again.

"What are the points? What's the difficulty?" he asked. "A woman has been shot"——

"No, not shot, stabbed. We thought she had been shot, for that was intelligible and involved no impossibilities. But Drs. Heath and Webster, under the eye of the Challoners' own physician, have made an examination of the wound—an official one, thorough and quite final so far as they are concerned—and they declare that no bullet is to be found in the body. As the wound extends no further than the heart, this settles one great point, at least."

"Dr. Heath is a reliable man and one of our oldest coroners."

"Yes. There can be no question as to the truth of his report. You know the victim? Her name, I mean, and the character she bore?"

"Yes; so much was told me on my way down."

"A fine girl unspoiled by riches and seeming independence. Happy, too, to all appearance, or we should be more ready to consider the possibility of suicide."

"Suicide by stabbing calls for a weapon. Yet none has been found, I hear."

"None."

"Yet she was killed that way?"

"Undoubtedly, and by a long and very narrow blade, larger than a needle but not so large as the ordinary stiletto."

"Stabbed while by herself, or what you may call by herself? She had no companion near her?"

"None. If we can believe the four members of the Parrish family who were seated at the other end of the room."

"And you do believe them?"

"Would a whole family lie—and needlessly? They never knew the woman—father, maiden aunt and two boys, clear-eyed, jolly young chaps whom even the horror of this tragedy, perpetrated as it were under their very noses, cannot make serious for more than a passing moment."

"It wouldn't seem so."

"Have you had a chance at this thing?" he asked. "Been over the ground—studied the affair carefully?"

"Yes, sir; they were good enough to allow it."

"Very well, then, you're in a position to pioneer me. You've seen it all and won't be in a hurry."

"No! I'm at the end of my rope. I haven't an idea, sir."

"Well, well, that's honest, at all events." Then, as he slowly rose, with the other's careful assistance, "There's no crime without its clew. The thing is to recognize that clew when seen. But I'm in no position to make promises. Old days don't return for the asking."

Nevertheless he looked ten years younger than when he came in, or so thought those who knew him.

The mezzanine was guarded from all visitors save such as had official sanction. Consequently, the two remained quite uninterrupted while they moved about the place in quiet consultation. Others had preceded them; had examined the plain little desk and found nothing; had paced off the distances; had looked with longing and inquiring eyes at the elevator cage and the open stairway leading to the little staircase and the musicians' gallery. But this was nothing to the old detective. The locale was what he wanted, and he got it. Whether he got anything else it would be impossible to say from his manner as he finally sank into a chair by one of the openings, and looked down on the lobby below. It was full of people coming and going on all sorts of business, and presently he drew back, and, leaning on Sweetwater's arm, asked him a few questions.

'Ungrateful Creature!'

IT was a very hot day, and a picnic had been arranged by the United States Society of Vegetarians. Therefore, one may guess that the little party that sat 'neath the shade of the green trees was mainly composed of old ladies.

They were comfortably seated, and waiting for the kettle to boil, when, horror of horrors! a savage bull appeared on the scene.

Immediately a wild rush was made for safety, while the raging creature pounded after one lady who, unfortunately, had a red parasol. By great good fortune she nipped over the stile before it could reach her. Then, regaining her breath, she turned round.

"Oh, you ungrateful creature!" she exclaimed. "Here have I been a vegetarian all my life. There's gratitude for you!"

The Girl, the Man and the Money — By Dorothy Dix

I HAVE a letter that would be funny if it wasn't so pathetic, from a girl who complains that when her "gentleman friend" comes to take her out to any place of amusement he always borrows the price from her, and never pays it back. She says that she thinks he is no gentleman.

No one will dispute her opinion of the grafting youth. Most of us, to quote T. R., would describe him by a shorter and uglier word. In fact if one should apply all of the opprobrious epithets in the dictionary of abuse to the creature—it would be rank flattery to call him a man—who is mean enough to sponge on a poor little working girl, one could scarcely do the subject justice.

A parasite is a contemptible object at best, but the male parasite who fastens himself upon the slim pocketbook of the woman who earns her own living is beneath contempt. He is the lowest thing that crawls, and why a girl should permit anything so loathsome to hang about her is past comprehension. Every sentiment of self-respect, every intuition of self-preservation should bid her spurn him from her presence the very first time he tries to dip his hand into her purse.

To this girl, and all other working girls, I say with all the earnestness I can command, never lend money to a man. Have nothing to do with a man who lets you pay for his meals, and his drinks, and his ticket when you go to places of amusement together. He is the cheapest sort of a deadbeat, and means you no good. He is simply playing you for an easy mark that he can work by making a little love to you and flattering you a bit.

A man never tries to borrow money of a woman until he has gotten so well known as a panhandler among men that no man will lend him a cent. Any honest fellow who pays his debts can get a few dollars from his men acquaintances if he happens to strike a streak of bad luck. It is only after one becomes notorious as a borrower who never pays back, and other men refuse to be held up any farther by him, that he descends to preying upon women.

Therefore, you may kiss your money good-by, little sister, when you lend it to one of this gentry. He never even intends to pay it back. If he did, he wouldn't have to borrow it of a woman.

Every dollar that a working girl has is strained with her very lifeblood. She has paid for every cent of it with long hours at desk, or typewriter, or behind the counter, or the machine in a factory. Every penny she saves out of her meagre wage represents incredible self-denial. If it could speak it would tell of the anguish of aching back and fainting body by which it was earned, of long blocks weary feet have walked to save car fare, of desires for pretty clothes and good food that have been crucified, and the man who would take from her the few dollars of her little hoard would steal the coins off his dead mother's eyes.

No man with one spark of manhood in him but would rather starve than take money from a working woman, while as for permitting her to pay for his amusements, he would rather go to purgatory than Revere Beach under such conditions.

Of course, these strictures do not apply to rich women who have plenty of money, and who are thus put on an equal financial footing with men, and may borrow and lend just as men do. Naturally there is no more reason why a man shouldn't borrow of Hetty Green or any other woman with money to lend than there is why he shouldn't borrow of Mr. Morgan or any other man.

It is the working girl and her problem we are discussing, and this is a problem she has to meet daily, for the minute a woman begins to earn money she is set upon by a horde of sycophantic men who get their evil living out of grafting upon women. All of the drunken, trifling, no account lazy loafers and ne'er-do-wells, all of the tellers of hard luck stories, and all of the visionary men with dopey schemes that they never have enough money of their own to finance themselves, swarm about her, and it takes grit and courage and independence to turn them down and keep a padlock on her pocketbook.

Yet that is what she must do for her own self preservation, and what makes the situation doubly hard for a sentimental and unsophisticated girl to deal with is that the foxy gentleman who is trying to borrow her money almost always accompanies his touch for a five or ten spot with ardent love making.

In this way he blinds the girl to his real motive, so that she cannot see how mean and selfish and low he is, or how little worth having is the man who even before marriage is willing to live on the hard toil of a woman.

The girl who lends money to a man on the theory that she will thereby bind him to her by ties of gratitude and appreciation makes the mistake of her life, for it it is true that the man who lends money to his friend loses his money and his friend both, it is doubly true of the woman who lends money to a man. There is no easier way for a woman to make a man hate her than for her to put him under obligations to her, and especially financial obligations that shame him in real men's eyes.

For proof of this you have only to take the multitudinous cases you see all about you of women who support their husbands, and in not one single instance will you find a man who is appreciative of what his wife does, or who treats her well. He will let her work herself to death for him, and then he revenges the bitterness of his dependence upon her in a thousand little tyrannies and grouches and tempers.

And this is, perhaps, natural. The right kind of a man doesn't take a woman's money, and the wrong sort may be depended upon to do the wrong thing.

Therefore, I say again to you, working girls, don't lend your money. Hold on to it. A dollar in your pocketbook is worth more than a beau whose way you have to pay.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Boston Market Opens Firm, but Trading Is Dull

By W. H. ROSS.

W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, July 26—Midday—There was a firm tone to the Boston market at the start, but trading was dull. The demand for copper issues continued limited. Most transactions were small. There was a gain for Butte and Superior, Shannon, Arizona Commercial and Granby, while Miami, North Butte and Amalgamated declined. The price variations were narrow with the exception of Granby. Its advance was substantial.

General Electric sold down here as in New York. American Telephone went up ⅝ on a one-share transaction. This indicates how active this market was this morning.

It is denied in Chicago that Swift & Co. are planning any big stock issue to execute financing which may be necessary after the Beef Trust is dissolved.

Another Chicago story is that the decline in National Biscuit was started by selling for the account of the Pullman estate, one of the largest holders, and F. M. Peters, one of the representatives of the latter.

New York Opens Irregular.

Irregularity was the most pronounced characteristic of the New York market at the opening. In spite of melon cutting, yesterday General Electric declined 1½. Copper issues on the other hand made gains in initial trading. Amalgamated, which sold ex-dividend 1 per cent at the opening, was ⅛ higher at 83½, but lost most of this in the next few minutes. Utah Copper started 1 point up at 62. Northern Pacific was the strongest of the railroad issues, selling at 123⅝, a gain of ⅝. An advance of ⅝ was made in Chicago & Northwestern, which sold at 140. Erie and B. & O were up ¼ each. Atchison gained ½ and Canadian Pacific moved up 1¼ points.

The Curb was also irregular at the start.

American issues were firm in the London market on professional operations. There was a spurt in Canadian Pacific there.

Boston News Bureau Number.

The Boston News Bureau, which became twenty-five years old yesterday, published an anniversary number to take note of the fact, exactly reproducing the first issue. It has grown in size during a quarter of a century, but it had at the start a reliability which was a guarantee of its prosperity and success. A Chicago newspaper recently referred to it as "The Bible of the New England investor." C. W. Barron has managed it with such news sense and writing skill that in and out of Boston it is regarded as a standard of what a financial publication should be like. It has become a Boston institution of much value, and is a credit to the city.

Copper Metal and Mining.

The copper metal market was firm this morning, according to early reports. Warrants were steady in London, where spot and futures opened [illegible] lower. But selling agencies, which did some business yesterday, are looking for no greatly increased demand for electrolytic at present.

Henry R. Merton & Co. of London say: "Consumers have withheld orders now for some considerable time and it is expected that they will soon have to come into the market, when the supplies of refined copper in second hands will be quickly absorbed and the producers will have to be called upon for further quantities. The latter remain entirely indifferent to the fall in standard copper and have declared their intention of adhering to their price, expressing their conviction that the intrinsic worth of the metal has not in the least been changed by the severe shake out in the speculative markets; if anything, this has strengthened the position by the elimination of weak holders, by the transfer of holdings into stronger hands and by the heavier bear account created in recent weeks."

A Butte dispatch to the Boston Financial News says a crosscut in the northeasterly direction has been run from the high ore mine of the Anaconda Company on the 200-foot level through a claim adjoining the Butte & London property on the west, intersecting a wide vein carrying high grade ore in commercial quantities. This vein is said to pass through Butte & London and to apex in it.

Would Hit B. & M. Hard.

In objecting to the proposed increase in the pay of locomotive engineers Vice-President H. J. Horn of the New Haven road told the Straus arbitration board in New York that the additional expense would be too much for the Boston & Maine. He said: "The dividends, which now have been reduced from 6 to 4 per cent., would be stopped. There would be no interest for bonds now outstanding and there would be an additional shortage of $1,000,000 for rentals. That is on the assumption that the increase would cost the Boston & Maine $3,000,000 a year for all the collateral increases which would have to follow those granted to the engineers."

Financial News in Brief.

The heavy buying of Steel in the late rally in the New York market yesterday was attributed to the fact that J. Pierpont Morgan is at home. He did not appear at his New York office, but it was rumored that he had bought big blocks of the issue through his brokers. Nothing tangible developed to verify the rumor.

One explanation of the lack of a quorum for a St. Paul meeting yesterday, is that directors wish to wait long enough to be absolutely certain as to crop conditions along the line of that road before taking dividend action.

It is predicted that the price of plates, structurals and bars will be further advanced $1 a ton within a few weeks. The steel industry of the country is being operated on a 90 per cent. capacity basis as a whole, in spite of the fact that it is hard in this business to keep up the pace in hot weather. Steel manufacturers are also laboring under the added handicap of a labor shortage. About 50,000 more men, mostly unskilled laborers are now needed in steel mills.

Attorney-General Wickersham and the Beef Trust lawyers will confer today on the plan of dissolution proposed by the packers. No approval of the plan by the government is expected until after United States District Attorney Wilkerson of Chicago reports to Mr. Wickersham in Washington full details as to the status of the situation at present.

It is declared by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Williams, Salomon & Co., who will manage the financing of the Emerson-Brantingham Company, that it is not organized to fight the International Harvester Company. It is at present planned to soon issue $12,000,000 of the authorized $20,000,000 preferred stock and $10,000,000 of the $30,000,000 common.

The increased stock issue of the General Electric Company will bring the annual dividend requirements, at the present rate of payments, up to $7,708,272. The company earned 13.6 on its capital stock in 1911, against 16.6 in 1910. Business increased during the last fiscal year, but reduced prices cut into profits.

It is emphatically denied by Pennsylvania road officials that it has been getting options on an immense tract of land along the Delaware River front with the intention of starting a line of steamships between New York and Philadelphia and cities along the Pacific coast as soon as the Panama Canal has been completed.

Representative Roberts of Massachusetts has introduced a resolution in the House requesting the Interstate Commerce Commission to report if freight rates on luxuries and non-essentials of life cannot be raised so that railroads can pay employes the higher wages they demand without cutting dividends.

The Stanley Committee reports on the Steel Trust investigation are now complete, and they will be submitted to the House next week. The Republican members of the committee will not report any draft of proposed legislation. They will merely recommend better federal control of corporations and more publicity concerning their affairs.

It was interesting to observe how Northern Pacific and Great Northern issues advanced in the stock market as soon as James J. Hill returned to New York from his hunting trip to Labrador. He said he was not informed as to business conditions, as he had been away in the wilds for a month.

American investments in Mexico are estimated at a total of $1,057,770,000, while those of Mexicans themselves amount to $793,187,000. British investments there total $321,302,000, and those of other countries $262,984,000.

MORLEY ASSERTS WRITERS MAKE GOOD STATESMEN

LONDON, July 26.—The freedom of Blackburn was presented to Viscount Morley in recognition of his services to literature and to the State. In returning thanks Lord Morley asked the audience to banish from their imagination the idea that, because a man knew and wrote books, he could not know men, that he could not render useful service in the deliberation of Parliaments, in Cabinets, in great departments of State. That, he declared, was a ridiculous idea, adding:

"Of our last seven Prime Ministers, five, I think I may say six, made their mark in the realm of books, and if they had been drawn by the necessities of life into journalism, I in my editorial days would have guaranteed any one of them a very excellent salary."

NOW NEWPORT GETS EGYPTIAN PRINCE

NEWPORT, R. I., July 26.—Prince Mahomet Ali, brother of the Khedive of Egypt, is expected here in about a week. It is reported he has reserved apartments at the Meunchinger-King cottage for himself and his suite and companions and attendants. Newport is excited over the prospect of entertaining so distinguished a young man. Prince Mahomet has been touring this country, and now is to see how the American millionaires, their wives and daughters disport themselves at their favorite Summer retreat. The girls are interested in seeing the Prince, especially as it is rumored His Highness is not averse to taking an American back to Egypt.

"Why I'm Single." By Helen Gould. "If I Had Found a Suitable Helpmate—"

GRAND JUNCTION, Col., July 26.—Miss Helen Gould, of New York, richest, best known and best loved "bachelor girl" in the world, has written to the Rev. Elmer F. Huffner here, taking issue with his recent sermon on "old maids."

Mr. Huffner has just resigned as pastor of the First Christian Church. He preached a sermon shortly before his resignation entitled "Love, Courtship and Marriage." In the course of that sermon, he advocated the exile of old maids to a barren island as waste humanity.

Miss Gould is certainly a spinster from choice. She has been called the best loved woman in the United States, for her charity and home missionary work. Probably there are few unattached bachelors in America or Europe—or the world for that matter, who would not seek her hand if the opportunity offered. She writes as follows to the Rev. Mr. Huffner:

> Glancing over a Denver paper I notice an item concerning your sermon on "Love, Courtship and Marriage," one part of which I especially notice saying that old bachelors and bachelor maids should be exiled on an island so they could not hinder the progress of civilization.
> I do not know why you made this statement, but I feel that it is a great injustice to the bachelor maids of our country. There are, I admit, many man haters in the world, but a great many bachelor maids are not living alone because they so chose but because they have been unable to find a suitable companion.
>
> I must admit that I am speaking from the standpoint of the bachelor maid. I feel that such persons as myself are not hindering the progress of civilization but advancing it.
> If I had found a suitable helpmate I might have spent my money in a different way, and a way which might not have done as much good as it has.
> Please think this question over and before preaching on this subject again make up your mind that there is some good in living a single life.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Joe Chuck, believed a Chinese tong traitor, was assassinated today as he sat peeling potatoes in the yard in the rear of the restaurant at No. 11 Pell street, where he was employed as cook. The slayer fired from the roof of the building in back of No. 11 and escaped.

SUSPECT SEEN WHETTING KNIFE

CARMEL, Me., July 26.—Sheriff T. H. White sent to Thomaston today for the bloodhounds kept at the State prison to place them on the trail of the slayer of Naomi Mitchell, the fourteen-year-old girl whose body was found in a cornfield near her home yesterday.

J. Sherman Gray, a giant farmhand, who is missing, is being sought in connection with the startling crime.

Under the direction of Sheriff White and his deputies, a posse of armed townspeople searched the country through the night. They resumed their hunt today. They are beating the thick woods in the neighborhood.

"Gray is being sought," said Sheriff White today. "He is the only suspect in the case. We expect to find him soon. He is without doubt in the woods, and we believe that the bloodhounds will run him down in a short time. I do not know how soon I can get the hounds here, but I'll get them as soon as possible.

"An autopsy was performed on the body of the girl last night. I have not heard the result yet. Her throat was cut with a sharp knife. Her clothing was torn. She fought hard for her life. She was a fine girl, and the community is shocked by the crime."

The killing of Naomi Mitchell has recalled the strangling of Mattie Hackett in this State. Elsie Hobbs Raymond awaits trial charged with this crime, which took place seven years ago.

Says Girl Was Followed.

Sheriff White today tried to get a photograph of Gray. He will print it if he finds one in a circular containing the missing man's description. This circular will be scattered throughout this section of the State.

The sheriff thinks that Gray will keep to the woods until hunger and thirst compel him to show himself.

Dr. F. L. Woodcock, an alienist of Bangor, said today that Gray is suffering from a form of insanity that will drive him back to the scene of the crime, if he is the murderer.

George E. Mason, proprietor of the store where the girl went to do the family shopping the night she was slain, says he saw Gray follow her. The child went down the Fuller road to her home. Gray went up another road. Then, Mason says, he retraced his steps and followed the girl.

The killing has aroused the countryside to great excitement. Ever since the body was found there have been threats.

County Stirred by Crime.

Naomi was the sixth of a family of eleven children. The oldest is twenty-four. The youngest is a baby, born last Sunday. The mother is critically ill.

On Naomi seemed to fall the lot of doing the shopping for the family. It was vacation and she was not busy at her lessons at the little district school. She was free at home and did most of the housework.

Gray was once arrested for stealing women's apparel from clotheslines, and in February, 1907, he was committed to the Maine Insane Hospital for one year.

The crime, which is similar to the slaying of the Conners girl in New York recently, has aroused the entire county and the searchers have set out after Gray with muttered threats.

Mr. Hawes, Gray's employer, says that Gray spent considerable time sharpening a large jack-knife, apparently taking pains to obtain as keen an edge as possible. The wounds on the girl's body indicate the use of a sharp instrument.

The country around North Carmel is sparsely settled, with large stretches of heavy timber, second growth and swamps. The spot where the murder was committed was out of sight and sound of any house.

Gray is familiar with the woods, being in the habit of wandering about, and for this reason his capture may be difficult, but Sheriff White is confident that Gray's arrest is a matter of a short time. Gray is of stocky, powerful build, weighing nearly 200 pounds. When last seen he wore working clothes, blue trousers tucked into rubber boots, a blue frock and straw hat with wide brim.

Wrangle in Melrose Delays Completion of New Memorial

Referendum petitions are in circulation in Melrose today in an attempt to block the $5,000 additional appropriation recently made by the city towards the $90,000 Soldiers and Sailors memorial building and city auditorium. The petitions follow several wrangles between members of the city government and members of the building commission having charge of the memorial structure.

Following subsequent charges of broken faith on the part of the building committee, the Aldermen appropriated the $5,000 requested by a vote of 14 to 5. Now comes the referendum, which, if filed, may delay the completion of the structure about three months.

None of the furnishings for the building can be purchased until the committee learns whether or not the $5,000 is appropriated. The structure is being built with the granite removed from the old Boston Court House in Court street, recently demolished. Of the money expended, $45,000 was given by the city and the balance raised by public subscription.

Second Suffrage Battle Is Fought at Mattapoisett

MATTAPOISETT, July 26.—The second battle of Mattapoisett has been fought. Like the first, it was a bloodless engagement. There were no fatalities, and there was no victory. But it was a battle.

Mattapoisett's fashionable society folk have split into factions—suffrage and anti-suffrage. It was the "antis" who starred in the second battle. An anti-suffrage meeting was held in the Town Hall. Miss Mary W. Barnard of Boston was chairman. There were several speeches and much cheering.

Mrs. Thomas Pelham Curtis of Beacon street, Boston, most recent fashionable recruit to the suffrage ranks, is the standard bearer in Mattapoisett. Her yacht bears the name "Votes for Women."

On the platform last night were Mrs. A. J. George of Brookline, Mrs. A. H. Parker, Mrs. J. M. Codman of Brookline, Miss Barnard and Mrs. Lindsley Loring. In the audience were half the fashionable folk of the place, including Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin, Mrs. S. D. Warren of Dedham, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Stoddard of Boston, Miss Catherine Maury of Philadelphia and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Wells of Boston. Miss Barnard characterized the suffrage cause as a "retrograde movement," and declared women were doing a splendid work today without entering politics.

'PHONE GIRLS TO MEET TODAY

Boston's 'phone girls—the Boston Telephone Operators' Union—hold three meetings today to take action on the company's concessions posted yesterday, with regard especially to the "night" and "split trick."

The girls, it was said at headquarters, are not satisfied with the concessions. They say the company was forced to grant the changes, but that the changes are not at all what was wanted. The girls, for instance, on the 10 p. m. and 7 a. m. shifts, want shorter hours rather than the $2 raise granted.

This morning and afternoon there will be meetings in the Woman's Trade League rooms on Warrenton street, and tonight the girls will meet in Wells Memorial Hall.

The girls will protest the proposed transfer of General Organizer Peter J. Lenihan of New York at tonight's meeting. Mr. Lenihan, who is organizer for eastern Massachusetts electrical workers, organized the Telephone Operators' Union in Boston with a membership of over 1500.

FALLS TO DEATH FROM A WINDOW

Jeremiah E. Bowen, thirty-eight years old, a brother of Patrick A. Bowen, former alderman, was killed instantly by falling from the second story of the lodging house at No. 30 Milford street today.

Bowen had returned two days ago from the Acton Inn, where he had been employed. His brother Patrick saw him last night.

"He was feeling fine and told me that he had taken a room in Milford street," said Mr. Bowen.

"When I reached the house today I noticed that the windows are close to the floor, and as Jerry loved plenty of fresh air, I think he tried to open the window and fell out. The idea of his committing suicide is foolish. He liked to live."

The body was removed to the City Hospital morgue, where Medical Examiner Watters will perform an autopsy to see what caused death.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The everlasting seach for improvement in the metals entering into the vital parts of automobiles and its accompanying results is the answer to the wonderful service these machines endure. A few years ago it was an every day occurrence to read of a serious accident, due to the failure of a vital part of a machine. Year by year these failures have grown less and less and today we marvel at the fact of some machine having been driven over an embankment or through a fence or being upset and that no damage has been done other than a few bent parts.

In this connection the makers of the Mitchell car have recently made a great "find." Several weeks ago Herr Ingineur Polstrovitz presented himself at the works with a letter of introduction from their London manager. His mission was to introduce a new metal possessing unusual tensile strength and none-crystallizing qualities. The Mitchell laboratories have since been busy testing the samples presented, and with results so far surpassing materials thus far known that confirming tests were ordered before the figures would be accepted. It is now rumored that the manufacture of this metal is contemplated by a large steel manufacturer of Chicago and the Mitchell company has acquired the exclusive use for automobile service. Herr Polstrovitz has been retained to supervise the production, which is by a secret process.

Dr. Charles G. Percival, editor of Health Magazine of New York and a former resident of Boston, who is attempting a 100,000-mile trip in the famous Abbott-Detroit "Bull Dog," is in the city this week calling on old friends. Dr. Percival has already travelled 55,000 miles of his attempted 100,000-mile automobile journey, having gone into every State in the Union, Mexico, Canada, Alaska and the Klondyke. He will resume his journey in the Fall, leaving Portland, Me., for California, and map out a new route for the American Automobile Association.

Will H. Brown, president of the Mais Motor Truck Company at Indianapolis, has organized a new company to be known as the Brown Truck Company. This company will build a medium-priced, light-delivery car at Peru, Ind. Associated with Mr. Brown will be C. H. Wallerich as vice president.

David Bruce-Brown has bought the Fiat car that he drove in the French Grand Prix race of the Automobile Club de France, and has entered it in the Grand Prize event at Milwaukee next Autumn. The car is rated as a 90-horse-power machine, but is really a 120-horse-power racer. It is like the other 90-horse-power cars that the Fiat company has produced, one of which Bruce-Brown drove to victory in the Grand Prize race last fall.

"Ed" and Henry Habich, who handle the Cole "30," in this territory are visiting the Cole factory in Indianapolis to get a line on the 1913 product.

TRUST EVILS SHOULD BE ADEQUATELY PUNISHED

"The Trusts Should Be Regulated and Restricted, But They Should Not Be Destroyed"

The Stanley committee of Congress has spent two years trying to find out what should be done to the trusts. It has come to the lame and impotent conclusion that "the control of corporations by the Federal government as recommended by Mr. Carnegie, Judge Gary and others is . . . semi-Socialistic in its nature and beyond the power invested by the Constitution in Congress."

The idea that the great corporations must in the end submit to reasonable and effective control by the government in the public interest was not Mr. Carnegie's idea, nor Judge Gary's, and it is not semi-Socialistic.

The idea was very definitely and briefly stated in a signed editorial by William Randolph Hearst more than thirteen years ago—on June 6, 1899—when he said:

> The trust is a labor-saving device that can lower the cost of production. The trust is also a great power which can raise the price of its commodities, rob its weaker rivals, corrupt Legislatures and oppress the public. These evils of the trust should be made criminal and adequately punished. The trusts should be regulated and restricted. But they should not be destroyed. And, what is more, they cannot be destroyed.

Three of the greatest trusts in the United States have been convicted in the Federal courts in the past five years of the sins Mr. Hearst predicted thirteen years ago, namely, "raising the prices of commodities, robbing weaker rivals, corrupting Legislatures and oppressing the public." These evils are now universally admitted. But they have never been adequately punished. The punitive power of justice has been shown to be weak. The criminal clause of the Anti-Trust law has been robbed of its sting. A mandate of dissolution from the highest court in the United States has not deprived the offending trust either of its profits or its dismembered parts. It has been found impossible to "unscramble an egg"—to use Mr. Morgan's happy phrase; the omelet has been divided into many parts, and in the process the market value of the whole has been increased.

Chairman Stanley's idea of limiting the power of trusts by putting an arbitrary limit upon the amount of business that any corporation shall do is not practicable and is not new. It is one of Mr. Bryan's fanatic and extreme fads, suggested by him four years ago and discarded by everybody as silly, and finally abandoned even by him.

It would be just as reasonable to put an arbitrary limit on the number of miles which a railroad shall operate, or the amount of traffic which it shall haul.

Formerly one travelled over eleven different railroads in making the journey from New York to Chicago. Men and goods are now carried quicker, cheaper and better by one railroad than they possibly could be by eleven. Freight is carried long distances in the United States at an average ton rate lower than anywhere else in the world, and this is due to great railway systems, the genius of men, concentration, co-operation and to a volume of traffic undreamed of a few years ago. A single telephone company stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Although there are innumerable independent telephone companies in the States traversed, a single company does more than half the telephone business of the country. It is possible to talk over its wires from New York to Denver, 2,100 miles.

According to Mr. Stanley's foolish 30 per cent. idea, this company would not be acquired by the government—a reasonable and beneficent step—but it should be split up into many parts and every man would have three or four different telephones on his desk when one is more convenient.

But every one realizes that the corporation has become so powerful that nothing less than the government itself can supervise it and control it. To say, as Chairman Stanley does, that Congress has no power under the Constitution is to say that the corporation is more powerful than all the people together. Congress represents the whole people. The Constitution vests in Congress the control of interstate commerce. That control has already been extended to the railroads. Even that right was stubbornly contested and strenuously denied for many years by men like Stanley, but it is now universally conceded.

But single corporations are now greater than any single railroad, create more interstate commerce than any railroad, and affect the public interests more closely than any single railroad. The largest railroad system in the United States does in one year only about one-third the business of the United States Steel Corpcration in good times.

We are sorry that Chairman Stanley's long, arduous and conscientious work should have led him to such a weak conclusion—to such contradictory and extraordinary ideas as that Congress, on one hand, has no power to supervise and regulate interstate corporations, but, on the other hand, has power to put some limit upon the size of corporations and the amount of business permitted to be done. In his first conclusion Mr. Stanley belittles Congress; in the second he magnifies its powers beyond all reason.

Mr. Stanley underestimates organization, co-operation and consolidation. He overestimates the power of Congress in thinking that it can do what it ought not to do and cannot do.

Irresistible natural forces and tendencies are behind the great growth of the corporations. To say that these irresistible forces can be stopped by an act of the Legislature is to confound an act of Congress with an act of God.

The trusts, which are already more powerful than any individual or any State, are not more powerful than all the people, and they can be controlled in the public interest by all the people acting through Congress.

Desperate Desmond—and Three Heroes

How a Merry Jest Was Played Upon the Bull Moose

1. THE START—With terrific speed, Hero Teddy sets forth upon his gallant steed, B. Moose.
2. THE FAUNAL NATIONALISTS—Heroes Wilson and Taft at once recognize the B. Moose. (They would know it in the dark, for they see it in their dreams.) And they plan a stunt for themselves.
3. THE AD.—Ha! they have painted ads for themselves on the B. Moose's antlers.
4. THE UNCONSCIOUS RIDER—Hero Teddy returns and mounts his B. Moose. He wonders at the laughter of the populace, which has hitherto regarded him with awe, amazement, etc.
5. THE WATER WAGON—As the B. Moose gets in range of the water wagon, on which Desperate Desmond Prohibition and Rosamond are riding, the water washes off the painted ads and foils Heroes Taft and Wilson.
6. THE STRUGGLE—Hero Wilson grapples single-handed with the B. Moose. A thrilling struggle. The result will be shown tomorrow.

The Marriage of the Very Young and Need of Mothers Leading Daughters to Think of Future

Couples Who Embark on Troubled Sea of Matrimony Must Learn at Outset the Serious Responsibilities They Will Soon Be Compelled to Shoulder.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"Poor little couple! And so you think you were formed for one another, and are to go through a supper-table kind of life, like two pretty pieces of confectionery?"

—David Copperfield.

THERE are girls and boys who marry at sixteen and eighteen, and who are not more sure they are alive and in love than they are sure they were made for each other.

Having filled the order of their being by marriage, they are as unfearing of the future as a baby that was born yesterday. They look at it with eyes as untroubled and as uncomprehending as the eyes of the baby looks into the faces of those around it.

It is Nature's kindest provision that a baby knows nothing to fear. If, with its first breath of life, it drew even the dimmest sense of the dangers ahead, it would cry itself to death.

Explains Why Youthful Pairs Wed with Little Thought of Future.

It imbibes confidence and assurance with its mother's milk, and doesn't begin to fear until it begins to think. The power of thought and the capacity for fearing come into being at the same time.

This may explain why girls and boys of sixteen and eighteen, who are in love, are not afraid to marry.

Love stills all their senses, and when in love they are no longer capable of thinking. And not being capable of thinking, they have no capacity for fearing.

For what they call thinking a practical world would call dreaming.

Each thinks of the other. Past scenes are lived over again and coming scenes rehearsed. Love lives on what is said when they are together and thrives on the memory of it when apart.

Fear? There isn't room for it in the mind of any boy and girl who are in love. There isn't room for anything but the other's charms.

Fear Doesn't Enter Mind of the Boy and Girl Ardently in Love

They regard the future as a prolonging of the present. Tomorrow will be another today, and all that marred today was that they were not together every minute.

That great drawback to their perfect bliss will be overcome when they are married. Hence, they must marry that they always may be together.

Being so completely in love, they don't think, and because they don't think they don't realize how much there is in the future to fear.

Older heads must do their thinking for them. This is also a provision of nature. Just as it is a provision of nature that some one must cover the baby when it is cold, feed it at stated periods and move it back from the fire when it is in danger.

The baby sometimes rebels. It wants to play with the blaze, and never having been burned it knows no fear.

The mother doesn't let the baby have its way. She knows pain and punishment lie that way.

But she sometimes lets a baby of sixteen, who is temporarily unable to do its own thinking, have its own way More than this, she has been known to urge that it have its way.

A daughter of sixteen, who played with dolls only yesterday, falls in love with a boy who is also a baby. The mother who grabs a baby away from the fire, pushes her daughter into it.

She doesn't say, "Wait until you are older." She regards the marriage as complacently as if the girl and her boy lover had the wisdom of the ages on their shoulders.

When mothers are as foolish as this, the only hope lies in girls learning to do their own thinking. And they must think, they must KNOW, that the responsibilities of life are too serious to be shouldered by mere girls and boys.

Urges Parents to See That True Love Exists Before Wedding Day Is Set

They must KNOW that if they are meant for each other, time will prove it, and treat them all the more kindly for waiting.

Calf love (boy and girl love) may develop into something truer and finer. But I beg of the young lovers, and also their mothers, that they give this love time to develop before the wedding day is set.

APPRECIATE THE AMERICAN'S FIGHT FOR OUR CANAL RIGHTS

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—As an American citizen, proud of our country, its destiny and its dignity, I desire to express my appreciation and approval of your editorials in the AMERICAN with reference to the right and duty of Congress to favor United States shipping, by preference, through the Panama Canal.

There is every evidence that the agitation, through the Hearst newspapers, of this vital principle of sovereignty over our own property will receive the enthusiastic approval of the American people to such an extent—as did your agitation of the question of the fortification of said canal—that Congress will be obliged to accept and enforce the American view rather than the English view.

J. W. H.

Which Are You the Most Interested in, the Panama Canal or the Boston Elevated?

Governor Foss Writes About Them BOTH, in His SUNDAY AMERICAN Editorial—You KNOW, of Course, That Governor Foss Will Be the Editor of Sunday's AMERICAN—Saying That "Panama and the Increasing Gulf Commerce Ought to Make New England Rich." WHAT GOVERNOR FOSS SAYS ABOUT THE BOSTON ELEVATED RAILWAY, AND ITS INFLUENCES IN THE LEGISLATURE, IS LIKELY TO CREATE A SENSATION.

The AMERICAN'S readers have already enjoyed a Sunday AMERICAN edited by the Governor of Maine and a Sunday AMERICAN edited by the Governor of New Hampshire.

The editor of NEXT Sunday's AMERICAN will be Eugene N. Foss, GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS.

And if we are at all capable of recognizing a sensation when we see one we are sure that THE GOVERNOR FOSS SUNDAY AMERICAN WILL BE THE SENSATION OF THE POLITICAL, LEGISLATIVE AND EXECUTIVE YEAR.

Governor Foss, in his Sunday AMERICAN editorial, discusses what he calls THE GREAT QUESTION TO BE SETTLED AT THE ELECTION IN NOVEMBER. He says the transportation service of Massachusetts must become in fact a PUBLIC service, operated on honest lines WITHOUT FLOUTING PUBLIC SENTIMENT, WITHOUT A LOBBY, and with principal reference to the INCREASING WELFARE of Massachusetts and New England.

The Governor discusses the Panama Canal. He points out that we are practically on the direct ocean line of European steamers to and from Panama and the Gulf ports. We hold the advantage of position, he says, over nearly every other section on EITHER THE ATLANTIC OR PACIFIC COAST. In the opinion of Governor Foss, Panama and the increasing Gulf commerce OUGHT TO MAKE NEW ENGLAND RICH; but not unless we WAKE UP TO OUR OPPORTUNITIES.

And then the Governor goes on to discuss the RAILROADS AND RAILWAYS OF MASSACHUSETTS. He insists again that the Railroad Commission, whose powers are MERELY RECOMMENDATORY, ought to be superseded by a Public Utility Board with MANDATORY power. Nineteen other States already have such powerful commissions as the Governor has in mind, with mandatory powers over railroads and ALL OTHER PUBLIC SERVICES. Governor Foss holds that EVERY CANDIDATE THIS FALL SHOULD BE PUBLICLY PLEDGED TO DO AWAY WITH THE EXISTING RAILROAD COMMISSION.

At least by inference, the Governor of Massachusetts declares in his Sunday AMERICAN editorial that the Legislature of 1912 was a corrupted Legislature. Lest there be any misunderstanding on this point, let us quote the Governor:

> The Legislature of 1912 was not only corrupted by the transportation interests, but it was affected by influences almost as sordid, namely, partisan bias.

But it is when he comes to consider the electrification of the steam railroads in the Metropolitan District—for a STARTER—and the talked-of construction of a TUNNEL FROM THE NORTH STATION TO THE SOUTH STATION, that Governor-Editor Foss says STRONG THINGS IN THE PLAINEST ENGLISH.

YOU have supposed—as WE had supposed, in our blissful editorial ignorance—that the railroads were NOT electrified and the tunnel was NOT built because the New Haven Railroad did not want them electrified and built.

LISTEN TO ONE WHO KNOWS. READ WHAT THE GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETS SAYS ABOUT IT. Again we quote from the Governor's Sunday AMERICAN editorial:

> The railroads have been willing for years to connect the North and South Stations by a tunnel, but this plan has been fought BY THE ELEVATED because of the fear that the railroads, with this tunnel established, would COMPETE WITH THE METROPOLITAN FIVE-CENT SERVICE OF THE ELEVATED SYSTEM.
> During the 1912 Legislature, the bitterest opposition to my proposal for the electrification of steam railroads entering Boston came NOT FROM THEM BUT FROM THE ELEVATED interests, and I NOW MAKE THE PUBLIC STATEMENT THAT THE ELECTRIFICATION OF ALL THE LINES ENTERING BOSTON WAS DEFEATED CHIEFLY BY THE INFLUENCE OF THE ELEVATED IN THE MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

And there is MORE of this, MUCH MORE, that EVERY CITIZEN OF MASSACHUSETTS, EVERY VOTER IN NEW ENGLAND, WILL WANT TO READ.

You have seen a lot of fussing, in publications that we can CHARITABLY allude to as our FALLEN SISTERS of THE PRESS, about the great demand in the hill towns of Western Massachusetts for trolley lines built and owned by the New Haven Railroad.

The poor hill towns! We presume that New Ashford is one of them—New Ashford, with a population of 92—wanting a street railway to be supported by the nickels of Springfield and Worcester, or, maybap, INCREASED FREIGHT AND PASSENGER RATES IN ALL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Read what Governor Foss has to say about these hill towns and their problem. HE WANTS TO HELP THEM. He WILL HELP THEM. But he will NEVER ALLOW THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD TO BOTTLE UP THE TROLLEYS.

With a remarkable drawing by Mr. John J. Moynahan, director of the AMERICAN'S excellent art department, the Governor Foss editorial will fill THREE PAGES OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN. Of course we can do no more here than indicate its general tenor. You will not expect more. The Governor declares himself, for instance, on the growingly important question of PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF TRANSPORTATION LINES.

Our earnest advice to EVERY ONE OF OUR FRIENDS IN NEW ENGLAND is not to miss the Governor Foss edition of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. It is OUR belief that on Monday next, and for many days afterwards, the Governor Foss Sunday AMERICAN will be THE TALK OF MASSACHUSETTS.

We do not see how the directors of the Boston Elevated Railway, for instance, can permit the charge of the Governor to GO UNANSWERED. And we do not need to say, in the eighth year of the life of the Boston AMERICAN, that the columns of this newspaper will be as free and as open to the Elevated and its answer as they are to the Governor and his unmistakable accusation.
